THEATRICAL FUNDS The Theatrical fund of Covent Garden was established in 1760, incorporated 1774, that of Drury Lane by Garrick 1766, incorporated 1775. They grant pensions to members and their families. The General Theatrical fund was established in 1839, incorporated 1853.

The Theatrical Museum and Institute for the benefit of theatrical employed, started in 1876. The princess Christian inaugurated for them "Macready" house, Covent Garden 30 Nov, 1887.

THEATROPHONE, a form of the telephone specially adapted for hearing theatrical performances at a distance. The apparatus of the "compagnie du theatrophone" of Paris was exhibited at the Savoy Hotel, and by its means the performance of the "Nautech Girl" at the Savoy theatre was said to be well heard, 11 Dec 1891.

THEBAN LEGION, according to tradition, was composed of Christians, and submitted to martyrdom rather than attack their brethren during the persecution of the emperor Maximin, or sacrifice to the gods, about A.D. 286. Their leader Maurice was canonised.

THEBES or LUXOR, in Upper Egypt, called also Diospolis, as being sacred to Jupiter Homer. Its foundation is by tradition attributed to Osiris. It is said to have been the magnificent capital of Egypt about 1600 B.C., having a circuit of about 14 geographical miles. It was then the chief seat of the worship of Ammon, or Amman, the Zeus Ammon of the Greeks, and the Jupiter Ammon of the Romans, and hence was called No Ammon by the Hebrews. Thebes was ruined by Cambyses, king of Persia, 525 B.C., and by the foundation of Alexandria, 332 B.C., it rebelled and was taken by Ptolemy Lathyrus, 86 B.C., and few traces of it were seen in the age of Juvenal, see Memnonianum. After centuries of neglect, the wonderful ruins have been greatly visited since the explorations of Belzoni, 1817.—THEBES, N. Greece (the capital is mythically said to have been founded by Cadmus.) The legendary history of Edipus and his family, celebrated by the Greek tragic poets, belongs to Thebes. It became a republic about 1120 B.C., and flourished under Epaminondas 378-362 B.C. The "sacred band" formed by him, 377 B.C., was revived in 1877. Thebes' seven gates are mentioned by Homer. See Bæotia and Greece.

THEFT was punished by heavy fines among the Jews, by death at Athens, by the laws of Draco. See Draco. The Anglo-Saxons nominally punished theft with death, if above 12d value, but the criminal could redeem his life by a ransom. In the 9th of Henry I this power of redemption was taken away, 1108. The punishment of theft was very severe in England, till mitigated by Peel's acts 9 & 10 Geo IV 1829. The laws respecting theft were consolidated in 1862.

THEINE, see Caffeine.

THEISTS (Theos, God), a name given to deists about 1660—Dean Martin. See Deism, Unitarians, and Voysey.

THELLUSON'S WILL, a most singular document. Mr Peter Isaac Thellusson a Genevese and an affluent merchant of London, left 100,000*l* to his widow and children, and the remainder of his property, more than 600,000*l*, he left to trustees, to accumulate during the lives of his three sons, and the lives of their sons, then the estates, directed to be purchased with the produce of the accumulated fund, were to be conveyed to the eldest lineal male descendant of his three sons, with the benefit of survivorship. Should no heir then exist, the whole was to be applied, by the agency of the sinking fund, to the discharge of the national debt. It is said that Mr Thellusson held much property in trust, and that he deeded a sufficient interval of time to elapse for the appearance of just claimants. He died 21 July, 1797. His will incurred much public censure, and was contested by the heirs at law, but finally established by a decision of the house of lords, 25 June, 1805. The last surviving grandson died in Feb 1856. A dispute then arose whether the eldest male descendant or the male descendant of the eldest son should inherit the property. The question was decided on appeal by the house of lords (9 June, 1859), in favour of the latter, lord Rendlesham and Charles S. Thellusson confirming the decision of the Master of the Rolls in 1858. In consequence of the legal expenses the property is said not to exceed greatly its value in the testator's lifetime. On 28 July, 1800, the Thellusson act was passed, restraining testators from devising their property for purposes of accumulation for longer than 21 years after death, any other direction to be void.

THEOCRACY, government by God, existed among the Israelites till Saul was made king, about 1095 B.C. (See Exodus 7).

THEODOLITE, an instrument for measuring horizontal angles, used in surveying, consists of a telescope and a divided circle. It was probably first constructed in the 17th century. Jesse Ramsden, in 1787, completed the great theodolite employed in the trigonometrical survey of England and Wales by general Roy.

THEODOSIAN CODE, see Codes.

"THEOLOGIA GERMANICA," or "Teutsche Theologie" (printed 1528, Latin and French editions, 1558), a German mystic work, written about the 14th century. In it the "good man," disgusted with the corruptions in church and state, is led to seek for God in the temple of the heart. Luther is said to have placed the work next to the Bible and St. Augustine.

THEOLOGY (from the Greek Theos, God), the science which treats of the nature and attributes of God, of his relations to man, and of the manner in which they may be discovered. It is generally divided into two heads: 1. Revelated including the Holy Scriptures, their interpretation, &c. 2. Natural, which lord Bacon calls the first part of philosophy. — Butler's "Analogy of Religion" (1736) and Paley's "Natural Theology" (1802) are eminent books on the latter subject. — Abelard (died 1142) wrote "Theologia Christiana." The "Summa Theologiae" by Thomas Aquinas (born about 1224), a standard Roman catholic work, was printed with commentaries, &c., in 1596.

THEOPHILANTHROPISTS (lovers of God and man), a sect formed in France in 1796, and headed by one of the first directors, Lepaux, in 1797, was dissolved in 1802.

THEOSOPHISTS, followers of Paracelsus in the 16th century.

The Theosophical Society was founded in America by Maurice B. Slattery, aided by Colonel Olcott about 1875. 6 Aims: 1. Universal brotherhood and the study of Eastern Theosophy. 2. It is a station in London, and many branches in India and other parts. Mrs Ann Kingsford M.D. president in 1887. died 22 Feb 1888.

Mrs Bant's lecture on Theosophy and Occultism at St James's Hall, 15 Oct 1891, related especially to Esoteric Buddhism. See described by Mr Smith.

THERMIDOR REVOLUTION. On the 9th Thermidor of the 2nd year (27 July, 1794), the Convention deposed Robespierre, and on the next day he and twenty-two of his partisans were executed.

THISTLEWOOD'S CONSPIRACY, see Cato's Conspiracy

THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, ST (Southwark), was founded as an almshouse by Richard priory of Bermondsey in 1213, and surrendered to Henry VIII in 1538. In 1557 the mayor and citizens of London, having purchased of Edward VI the manor of Southwark, including this hospital, repaired and enlarged it, and admitted into it 260 poor, sick, and helpless objects, upon which the king, in 1553, incorporated it, together with Bethlehem, St Bartholomew's &c. It was rebuilt in 1693. In 1862, the site was sold to the South-eastern railway company, and the patients were removed to the Surrey music hall. The foundation stone of the new hospital, erected at Stangate near the Surrey side of Westminster bridge, was laid by the queen, 13 May, 1868, and the new hospital was opened by her majesty, 21 June, 1867.

This appointment of a paid resident treasurer instead of an honorary one and other changes recommended by committees were negatived by the general committee, Nov 1877.

Establishment of wards for paying patients settled 30 Nov 1878.

* Some Scottish historians make the origin of this order very ancient. The abbot Justinian says it was instituted by Achaus I of Scotland 809 when that monarch made an alliance with Charlemagne and then took for his device the thistle. It is stated that the king Hungus the First had a dream in which St Andrew made a midnight visit and promised him a sure victory over his foes the Northumbrians and that the next day St Andrew's Cross (X) appeared in the air and the Northumbrians were defeated. On this story, it is said Achaus framed the order more than 700 years before James V.

THOMISTS, see Scotts

THOMITES or TOMITES, a body of enthusiasts who assembled at Boughton, near Canterbury. An insane Cornish publican named John Nicholls, called Thom, or Tom, assumed the name of Mr W Courtenay, knight of Malta and king of Jerusalem, came into Kent, was an unsuccessful candidate for parliament, and incited the rabble against the Poor Law act. On 31 May, 1838, a farmer of the neighbourhood, whose servant had joined the crowd which attended Thom, sent a constable to fetch him back but on his arrival on the ground he was shot dead by Thom. The military were then called out, and Lieut Bennett proceeded to take the murderer into custody, but Thom advanced, and, firing a pistol, killed the lieutenant on the spot. One of the soldiers fired at Thom, and laid him dead by the side of Lieut Bennett. The people then attacked the military, who were compelled to fire, and eight more persons were killed before the mob dispersed.

THORACIC DUCT, discovered first in a horse, by Kustachus about 1563, in the human body, by Ol Rudbeck, a Swedish anatomist Thomas Bartholine, of Copenhagen and Mr Joliffe, of England, also discovered it about 1654. See Lactals.

THRASHING-MACHINES The flail was the only instrument formerly in use for thrashing corn. The Romans used a machine called the tribulum, a sledge loaded with stones or iron drawn over the corn-sheaves by horses. The first machine attempted in modern times was invented by Michael Menzies, at Edinburgh, about 1732. Andrew Meikle invented a machine in 1766. Many improvements have been since made and steam is employed. An act for the prevention of accidents by these machines was passed in 1879.

THRASYMENE or TRASIMENE (more correctly Transvurnus), a lake (N. Italy). A most bloody engagement took place near the Trasimene lake between the Carthaginians under Hannibal and the Romans under Flaminius, 217 B.C. No less than 15,000 Romans were left dead on the field of battle, and 10,000 taken prisoner, or, according to Livy, 6000, or Polybius, 15,000. The loss of Hannibal was about 1500 men. About 10,000 Romans made their escape, all covered with wounds. Flaminius was killed during the fight—Livy, Polybius. On the same day, an earthquake occurred, which desolated several cities in Italy.

THREATENING LETTERS Sending letters, whether anonymously written or with a fictitious name, demanding money, or threatening to kill a person, or fire his house, was made punishable as a felony, without benefit of clergy, by the Black Act, in 1722. Persons extorting money by threatening to accuse others of such offences as are subjected to death, or other infamous punishments, were to be adjudged imprisonment, whipping, or transportation, by 30 Geo. II., 1756, and other acts, the latest 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, 97 (1861).

TIMBER. The annual demand of timber for the royal navy, in war, was 60,000 loads, or 40,000 full-grown trees, a ton each, of which 35 will stand on an acre; in peace, 32,000 tons, or 48,000 loads. A 74 gun ship consumed 3000 loads, or 2000 tons of trees, the produce of 57 acres in a century. — Albion. Iron is now largely used in preference to timber. In 1843 we imported 1,317,645 loads of timber (cut and uncut); in 1857, 2,495,964 loads; in 1866, 3,638,344 loads; in 1871, 4,497,136 loads; in 1875, 5,092,394 loads; in 1877, 6,788,789 loads; in 1883, 6,009,042 loads; in 1887, 5,653,791 loads. In 1866, we imported 53,458 tons of mahogany; in 1871, 29,250 tons; in 1875, 80,705 tons; in 1877, 53,600 tons; in 1883, 50,158 tons; in 1887, 37,650 tons. The duties on timber were modified in 1851.

TIME. See Hour, Day, Month, Year, Geology, Diets, Clocks and Watches.

TIMES NEWSPAPER. On 1 Jan. 1785, Mr. John Walter published the first number of the Daily Universal Register, price 2d., printed on the logographic system (invented by Henry Johnson, a compositor), in which types containing syllables and words were employed instead of single letters.

On 1 Jan. 1788, the paper was named the Times. In 1803, when Mr. John Walter gave up the paper to his son John, the circulation was about 1000; that of the Morning Post being 4500.

Mr. John Walter (†) died 16 Nov. 1822. Dr. Stoddart (succeeded as Dr. Stoop by Moore the poet) became editor in 1812, but five years after retired and set up in opposition the New Times, an unprofitable speculation. Thomas Barnes became next editor. He died 7 May, 1841, and was succeeded by his assistant John Thaddeus Delane (son of W. F. A. Delane, financial manager) who retired in 1877, and died 22 Nov. 1879.

On 28 Nov. 1822, the Times was first printed by steam power (the invention of F. Kithig), 1200 per hour, afterwards increased to 2000 and 4000.

It is asserted that the Times was termed the "Thunderer," in consequence of an article by Edward Sterling in which are the words, "We thundered forth articles on reform, &c." when Barnes was editor.

On 12 Jan. 1829, the first double number appeared. In July, 1834, an attack of Mr. O'Connell in the house of commons on the correctness of the reports of the debates in the Times was signally defeated. Shortly after began the conventional summary of the debates, written in the first instance by Mr. Horace Twiss.

In 1841 the Times was instrumental in detecting and exposing a scheme organised by Allan George Bogle and others, to defraud by forgery all the influential bankers of Europe. This brought on the proprietors an action for libel (in the case Bogle v. Lawson). The jury found the charge to be true, giving a verdict of considerable damages, but the judges refused costs. Subscribers were set on foot at the Mansion-house and in all parts of Europe to reimburse the proprietors for the immense outlay in defending the action. This they firmly declined; and the money was expended in establishing Times Scholarships at Oxford and Cambridge, and at Christ's Hospital, and other schools, a marble tablet also, commemorating the event, was set up in the Royal Exchange and at the Times office. These were the greatest honours ever conceded to a newspaper.

In Oct. 1845, the Times express was for the first time conveyed to India overland, by the agency of Lieut. Waghorn.

Of the number of the Times containing the life of the duke of Wellington for 19 Nov. 1845, 25,000 were sold—the ordinary number being then 35,000; the circulation is stated to vary from 50,000 to 60,000 (1868). The Times (a slip) announcing permission to relax restriction of issues of bank-notes, published 24 Oct. 1847.

Mr. John Walter (2) died 28 July, 1847; Mr. John Walter (3) born in 1828.

In 1854, the proprietors sent Mr. W. H. Russell as their special correspondent to the seat of war in the Crimea; in 1857 to India.

Times Fund.—On the 18th of Oct. 1854, Mr. Robert Peel originated by a letter in the Times a subscription for the sick and wounded in the Crimean war, and in less than a fortnight 15,000l. were sent to the Times office to be thus appropriated. Mr. MacDonald was sent out by the proprietors as special commissioner to administer the fund, from which large quantities of food and clothing were supplied to the volunteers, with inestimable advantage, see Sanitary, and Nightingale.

In Dec. 1852, the Times drew attention to the state of the houseless poor of London; and in a few days 8000l. were subscribed for their relief.

In 1851, 13,000,000 copies were sold; in 1857, 16,100,000; in 1859, 16,000,000; in 1860, 16,000,000. The Times of 21 June, 1861, contained 4976 advertisements (about 1860 it contained 95 advertisements). Stereotypes from paper-maché moulds introduced, 1856; much improved 1860.

The "Walter press" invented by John Cameron MacDonald (aft. Manager) & Joseph Calverley, prints about 15,000 no. hour, perfected, 1862-71.

A list of the contents, inserted over the first leader, appeared first, 3 Feb. 1860.

38 pages tables of metropolitan charities appeared 11 Feb. 1860.

Special Julio for converting the Times North-Western Railway, began to run, 4.55 a.m., 26 Feb. 1875.

Annual summaries, 1851-75, reprinted, price 1s. (type set-up by composing-machines).

12,000 perfect sheets per hour printed by "Walter Press," Jan. 1876.

Weekly issue, price 4d., began, 1 Jan. 1877.

The Rapiet electric lamp adopted in the machine-room, Nov. 1878.

Mr. Palmer's "Index to the Times" began 1867; now printing for Times from 1838 and containing 1892.

Summary of the Times published daily, 4d. about 26 July, 1883; stopped, Oct. 1884.

Deane Thomas Chennery, 25 years editor, long correspondent, 27 Feb.; succeeded by G. E. Buckle, Feb. 1884.

The Times consisted of 24 pages 21, 26 June, 1861; 12 June, 1864; 5 times in 1865; 3 times in 1867; 6 times in 1868; 11, 16, 25 May, 1, 22, 29 June, 1869; 3, 10, 17 May, 7, 14 June, 1890; 30 May, 6, 13, 20, 27 June, 1891; 7, 14, 21, 28 May, 4, 11, 18, 25 June, 2 July, 1892.

TITHING The number or company of ten men with their families knit together in a society, all of them being bound to the king for the peaceable and good behaviour of each of their society; of these companies there was one chief person, who, from his office, was called (tithingman) tithingman, but now he is nothing but a constable, formerly called the headborough Coul

TITLES ROYAL Henry IV had the title of "Grace" and "My liege," 1399 Henry VI,

"Excellent Grace," 1423 Edward IV, "Most High and Mighty Prince," 1461 Henry VII, "Highness," 1485; Henry VII the same title, and sometimes "Grace," 1509 et seq. Francis I of France addressed Henry as "Your Majesty" at their interview in 1520, see Field of the Cloth of Gold. Henry VIII was the first and last king who was styled "Dread Sovereign." James I coupled to "Majesty," the present "Sacred," or "Most Excellent Majesty." "Majesty" was the style of the emperors of Germany, the first king to whom it was given was Louis XI of France, about 1463.

TITLES TO LAND CONSOLIDATION ACT (Scotland), passed 31 July, 1868, and amended in 1869.

TIVOLI, see Tibur.

TOBACCO,* Nicotiana tabacum, received its name from Tabaco, a province of Yucatan, New Spain, some say from the island of Tobago, one of the Caribbees, others from Tobasco, in the Gulf of Florida. It is said to have been first observed at St Domingo, in Cuba, 1492, and to have been used freely by the Spaniards in Yucatan in 1520. Tobacco was either first brought to England in 1565, by Sir John Hawkins, or by Sir Walter Raleigh and Sir Francis Drake, in 1586. It was manufactured only for exportation for some years. Stow's Chron. The Pied Bull inn, at Islington, is said to have been the first house in London where tobacco was smoked. In 1584 a proclamation was issued against it. James I published "A Counter-blaste against Tobacco," and the star-chamber ordered the duties to be 6s 10d per pound, 1614. Its cultivation was prohibited in England by Charles II, 1684. Act laying a duty on the importation was passed 1684. The cultivation was allowed in Ireland, 1779. The tax was increased and put under the excise, 1789. Anderson Ashe. Various statutes have passed relative to tobacco. Act to revise the act prohibiting the culture of tobacco in Ireland passed 2 Will IV, Aug 1831. Act directing that tobacco grown in Ireland be purchased in order to its being destroyed, 23 March, 1832. The quantity consumed in England in 1791 was nine millions and a half of pounds, and in 1829 about fifteen millions of pounds. We imported in 1860, 35,166,358 lbs, and 1,557,558 lbs manufactured (cigars and snuff); in 1855, 36,820,816 lbs, and 2,651,544 lbs manufactured; in 1860, 48,036,471 lbs, and 2,110,430 lbs manufactured; in 1864, 61,042,667 lbs, and 6,576,707 lbs manufactured; in 1866, 54,374,800 lbs, and 3,111,906 lbs manufactured; in 1871, 73,042,305 lbs, and 3,822,236 lbs manufactured; in 1876, 76,814,974 lbs, and 3,818,682 lbs manufactured; in 1879, 38,861,220 lbs, and 3,591,558 lbs manufactured; in 1883, 56,475,199 lbs, and 3,121,174 lbs manufactured; in 1887, 72,178,994 lbs and 3,595,071 manufactured; in 1890, 65,729,970 lbs, and 3,678,846 lbs manufactured. The tobacco duties were modified in 1863, raised April, 1878 2d a lb extra duty on cigars added, April, 1879. Act customs duties paid for tobacco and snuff in the year 1875-6, 7,744,977l, 1877-8, 8,006,836l, 1883-4, 8,991,205s, 1886-7, 9,367,186l, 1887-8, 8,713,944l, 1888-9, 8,853,761l, 1889-90, 9,061,984l, 1890-91, 9,533,888l.

Permission to grow tobacco in England with conditions granted by the Board of Trade, April, 1886. Tobacco successfully cultivated by Messrs James Carter and Co., near Brouley, Essex, Sept 1886, and by others in 1887.

* British Anti-Tobacco Crusade, originated by the late Thos. Reynolds in 1853. 60,000 of its publications had been circulated gratuitously in 1876.

Duty per lb on manufactured tobacco reduced from 3s 6d to 3s 2d, cigars 5s, snuff 3s 6d, or 4s 6d, 1887.

TOBAGO (West Indies), discovered by Columbus in 1498, settled by the Dutch 1642. Taken by the English, 1672, retaken, 1674. In 1748, it was declared a neutral island, but in 1763 it was ceded to the English. Tobago was taken by the French under De Grasse in 1781, and confirmed to them in 1783. Again taken by the English, 14 April, 1793, but restored at the peace of Amiens, 6 Oct. 1802. The island was once more taken by the British under general Grimfeld, 1 July, 1803, and was confirmed to them by the peace of Paris, in 1814. Population in 1887, 19,937. Tobago is one of the Windward Isles, which see. Tobago was united with Trinidad by parliament in 1887. Population of Tobago, 1891, 18,353.

TOBITSCHAU (Moravia). In a sharp action here, on 15 July, 1866, the Austrians were defeated by the army of the crown prince of Prussia with the loss of 500 killed and wounded and 500 prisoners, and seventeen guns.

TOKAY, a town in Upper Hungary, celebrated for its wines, made here by drassan, brought from Italy by Bele IV, king 1235-70. The wine is principally used by sovereigns, and 30 bottles were presented to queen Victoria at her jubilee, 1887.

The town with its six churches and public buildings, was destroyed by fire 26 Aug 1890. About 400 persons rendered homeless.

TOKENS, BANK, silver pieces issued by the Bank of England, of the value of 5s, 1 Jan 1798. The Spanish dollar had a small profile of George III. stamped on the neck of the Spanish king. They were raised to the value of 5s 6d 14 Nov 1811. Bank tokens were also current in Ireland, where those issued by the bank passed for 6s and lesser sums until 1817. They were called in on the revision of the coinage. Irregularities were permitted to issue tokens as small coins from 1648 till 16 Aug 1672, when their circulation was prohibited by royal proclamation. These tokens are figured and described in a work by Wm Boyce, 1856.

TOKIO, the name given to Jedo, the capital of Japan, about 1869. Great fire, 5000 houses destroyed, and 45 persons perished, 10 April, 1892. See Jedo. Population, 1887, 1,552,457.

TOLEDO, the ancient Toletum (Central Spain), made capital of the Visigothic kingdom by Athanagild, 554, taken by the Saracens, 712. Toledo was taken after the war begun 1081, by Alfonso I of Castile, 25 May, 1085. In 1088 the archbishop was made primate of Spain. The university was founded in 1499. Toledo sword-blades have been famed since the 15th century. Population, 1887, 20,837.

The alcázar, ancient Moorish palace, used by the emperor Charles V., destroyed by fire, 9-10 Jan 1887.

TOLENTINO (Italy, formerly in the Papal states), where a treaty was made between the pope and the French, 19 Feb 1797. Hiero Joachum Murat, having resumed arms against the allies, was defeated by the Austrians, 3 May, 1815, taken prisoner, and shot.

TOLERATION ACT, passed in 1689, to relieve Protestant dissenters from the church of England. Their liberties were, however, greatly endangered in the latter days of queen Anne, who died on the day that the Schism bill was to become a law, 1 Aug. 1714.

The toleration granted was somewhat limited. It exempted persons who took the new oath of allegiance and supremacy, and made also a declaration against popery, from the penalties incurred by absenting themselves from church and holding unlawful convocations, and it allowed the quakers to substitute an affirmation for an oath, but did not relax the provisions of the Test act (which see). The party spirit of the times checked the king in his liberal measures.

TOLLS were first paid by vessels passing the Stade on the Elbe, 1107. They were first demanded by the Danes of vessels passing the Sound, 1341, see Stade, and Sound. Tollbars in England originated in 1267, on the grant of a penny for every wagon that passed through a certain manor; and the first regular toll was collected a few years after for mending the road in London between St. Giles's and Temple-bar. Gathered for repairing the highways of Holborn-inn lane and Martin's-lane (now Aldersgate-street), 1346. Toll-gate or turnpikes were set up in 1663. In 1827, 27 turnpikes near London were removed by parliament; 81 turnpikes and toll-bars ceased on the north of London on 1 July, 1864; and 61 on the south side, ceased on 31 Oct. 1865; and many others on the Essex and Middlesex roads ceased on 31 Oct. 1866; the remainder on the north of London ceased 1 July, 1872. The tolls on the Commercial roads, London, E., were abolished 5 Aug. 1871. The tolls on Waterloo and other metropolitan bridges abolished, 1878-9. The high road from Brighton to London free from toll, 31 Oct. 1881. See Wales, 1843 and 1889.

TOLOSA. On the plain named las Navas de Tolosa, near the Sierra Morena, S. Spain, Alfonso, king of Castile, aided by the kings of Aragon and Navarre, gained a great victory over the Moors, 16 July, 1212. This conflict is sometimes termed the battle of Murad.

TONGA ISLES, Pacific Ocean. The king, George I., concluded a treaty with Germany, 1 Nov. 1876; with Great Britain, 29 Nov. 1879.

TONIC SOL FA SYSTEM. See Music.

TONK, Rajpootana, India. The nawab and his minister, for a massacre of Hindoo chiefs, 1 Aug. 1867, were deposed by the British. In 1872 he demanded investigation, and his case came before parliament without any issue.

TONNAGE. The Tonnage Act of 1694 established the Bank of England (which see). See Tunnage.

TONOMETER, a delicate apparatus (consisting of 52 forks) for tuning musical instruments, by marking the number of vibrations, was invented by H. Scheibler of Grefeld, and described in his "Tonmesser," 1834. It received little notice till M. Koenig removed some of the difficulties opposed to its successful use, and exhibited it at the International Exhibition of 1862.

TONQUIN, S.E. Asia, the delta of the river Songkoi, a province of Annam, subject to China. Here a French missionary bishop, Melchior, was murdered with great barbarity 27 July, 1858; the abbé Neron was also murdered, 3 Nov. 1860; see Annam.

* The Black Flags originated with Li-Hung-Chang, an able leader of the Canton rebels, who about 1853 with his followers took refuge in Tonquin, where he was at first tolerated by the emperor of Annam, but afterwards, being strengthened by many adherents, established an independent despotic government. He strenuously opposed the French.

 sixth century

TONTINES, loans given for life annuities with benefit of survivorship, invented by Laurence Tonti, a Neapolitan. They were first set on foot at Paris to reconcile the people to cardinal Mazarin's government, by amassing them with the hope of becoming suddenly rich, 1653 Voltaire. Tont died in the Bastille after seven years imprisonment. A Mr Jennings was an original subscriber for a 100l share in a tontine company, and being the last survivor of the shareholders, his share produced him 3,000l per annum. He died aged 103 years

TORBANEHILL MINERAL Mr Gallespie, of Torbanehill, granted a lease of all the coal in the estate to Messrs Russell. In the course of working, the lessees extracted a combustible mineral of considerable value as a source of coal-gas, and realized a large profit in the sale of it as gas-coal. The lessor then claimed that the mineral was coal, and disputed the right of the lessees to work it. At the trial in 1833 there was a great array of scientific men and practical gas engineers, and the evidence was most conflicting. One side maintained the mineral to be coal, the other that it was a bituminous schist. The judge set aside the scientific evidence, and the jury pronounced it to be coal. The authorities in Prussia have since pronounced it not to be coal. Percy

TORDESILLAS (near Valladolid). Here was signed, 7 June, 1494, a treaty modifying the battle between Frederick II of Prussia and the Austrians, in which the former obtained a signal victory. The Austrian general, count Daun, being wounded, 3 Nov 1760. He had in 1757, obtained a great victory over the Prussian king. Torgau was taken by the allies in 1814, and given to Prussia, 1815

TORIES, a term given to a political party about 1678, see Whig. Dr Johnson defines a Tory as one who adheres to the ancient constitution of the state, and the apostolical hierarchy, of the Church of England. The Tories long maintained the doctrines of "divine hereditary inalienable right, limited succession, passive obedience, pierce-grave," &c. Bolingbroke, see Constitution. For the chief Tory administrators, see Pitt, Perceval,

TORPEDO SHELLS, a name given to explosives placed under ships, an invention ascribed to David Bushnell, an American, in 1777. His attempt to destroy H.M.S. Cerberus failed. The action of Fulton's torpedoes was successful in Britain 1805, but their use was declined by the government. Torpedo shells ignited by electricity were successfully employed in the war in the United States, 1861-5. On 4 Oct. 1865, Messrs McKay & Beaulieu tried them at Chatham before the duke of Somerset and others. An old vessel, the Terpsichore, was speedily sunk. Torpedoes, made by professor (aft. Mr Frederick) Abel, of Woolwich, were tried in May, 1866. A torpedo invented by Mr Wightman and an Austrian, tried and reported successful at Shoerness, an old hulk was sunk, 8 Oct. 1870. Torpedoes to be ignited from a distance by an electric battery are now made at Woolwich. A Turkish monitor in the Danube was blown up by a torpedo (see Russo-Turkish war, II), 26 May, 1877. Whitehead's fish torpedoes, projected by compressed air from a boat, very destructive if skilfully directed, described Nov. 1884.

TORQUAY, a seaport in Devonshire. The pier harbour was made in 1803-7, and enlarged in 1870. Torre Abbey was founded in 1190. The prince of Orange landed at 1 p.m. 5 Nov. 1688. Population, 1881, 24,767, 1891, 25,534.

In Kent's Hole a cavern near Torquay the rev. Mr McGarry discovered a quantity of bones of extinct and recent animals, 1829-9. The investigation was continued by Mr Edwin Anstey, 1840 by the Torquay Natural History Society, and by a committee of the British Association in 1865 by whom the results were published. Mr William Pengelly, of Torquay, was actively engaged in the investigation.
The prince Louis laid the memorial stone of the new pier and harbour works 6 May, 1890.
Charter granted to Torquay Aug. 1892.

TORRES STRAIT, dividing Australia from Papua or New Guinea, was discovered by Torres, a Spaniard, in June, 1606.

TORRES VEDRAS (a city of Portugal). Near here Wellington, returning from the French, took up a strong position, called the Lunes of Torres Vedras, 10 Oct. 1810.

TORTOLA, see Virgin Isles.

TORTURE was only permitted by the Romans in the examination of slaves. It was applied to heretics by the Roman Catholic clergy, and was used in England so late as 1610 (when Archer, who took part in an attack on Laud's palace, was racked), and in Scotland until 1690. The trial by torture was abolished in Portugal, 1776, in France, by Louis XVI., in 1789, and in Sweden by Gustavus III., 1786. General Pardon was convicted of allowing Louis Cludron to be tortured in Trinidad, in accordance with the old law of the island, at his trials, 21 Feb. 1806, and 11 June, 1808.

TOUGHENED GLASS, see Glass.

TOUL, the Roman Tulla Lenoorum, a fortified town on the Moselle, N. E. France, one of the most ancient in the empire. The city and diocese acquired great privileges from Charles the Simple, 925, when it was united with the German empire. It was reunited with France, 1552. The fortifications, begun in 1238, were rebuilt and enlarged in 1700, according to the plans of Vauban. After a vigorous resistance to the Germans, commencing 14 Aug. 1870, Toul surrendered with its garrison of 3000 men, 23 Sept., when the town was burning in twenty-three places. The Germans thus acquired an uninterrupted railway communication to Paris.

TOULON, the ancient Telo Martius (S. France), an important military port. It was taken by the constable of Bourbon, 1524, and by the emperor Charles V. in 1536. In 1707 it was bombarded by the allies, both by land and sea, by which almost the whole town was reduced to a heap of ruins, and several ships burned, but the allies were at last obliged to raise the siege. It surrendered 27 Aug. 1793 to the British admiral, lord Hood, who took possession both of the town and shipping, in the name of Louis XVII., under a stipulation to assist in restoring the French constitution of 1789. A conflict took place between the English and French forces, when the latter were repulsed, 15 Nov. 1793. Toulon was retaken by Bonaparte, 19 Dec., when great cruelties were exercised towards such of the inhabitants as were supposed to be favourable to the British — a naval battle off this port was fought 11 Feb. 1744, between the English under Mathews and Lestock, against the fleets of France and Spain. In this engagement the brave captain Cornwall fell. The victory was lost by a misunderstanding between the English admirals. Mathews was afterwards dismissed for misconduct. See Cholera, 1884.
Visit of Queen Victoria 13 April, 1892.

TOULOUSE, the ancient Tolos (S. France), founded about 615 B.C., was the capital of the Visigothic kings in A.D. 419, and was taken by Clovis in 508. The dukes of Aquitaine reigned here, 631-761. A university was established here, 1229, and a parliament, 1302. The inquisition was established here to extirpate heretics, 1229. The troubadours, or rhymers of Toulouse, had their origin about 850, and consisted of a fraternity of poets, whose art was extended throughout Europe, and gave rise to the Italian and French poetry, see Troubadours. The allied British and Spanish army entered this city on 12 April, immediately after the battle of Toulouse fought between the British Peninsular army under lord Wellington and the French led by marshal Soult, 10 April, 1814. The French were forced to retreat, after twelve hours' fighting. Neither of the commanders knew that Napoleon had abdicated the throne of France. Population, 1886, 147,617, 1891, 148,220.

TOULOUSE. The county was created out of the kingdom of Aquitaine by Charlemagne, in 778. It enjoyed great prosperity till the dreadful war of the Albigenses (which see), when the count Raymond VI. was expelled, and Simon de Montfort became count. At his death, in 1218, Raymond VII. obtained his inheritance. His daughter Jeanne and her husband, Alphonse (brother of Louis IX. of France), dying without issue, the county of Toulouse was united to the French monarchy in 1271. A large part of Toulouse destroyed by an inundation of the Garonne, St. Cyprien like a sepulchre, 23 June, 1875.

TOURAINÉ, the garden of France, was conquered by the Visigoths about 480. It was ceded to Geoffrey count of Anjou, 1044, and thus became the property of the Plantagenet kings of England it was seized by Philip Augustus in 1203, and was made a duchy by John, 1360. It was finally united to the crown on the death of the duke of Anjou, 1384.

TOURNAMENTS, or JOUSTS, were martial sports of the ancient cavaliers. Tournament is derived from the French word tourner, 'to turn round'. Tournaments were frequent about 890, and were regulated by the emperor Henry I., about 919. Tournaments were introduced into England early in the 12th century, prohibited by Henry II. but revived by Richard I., his son. Solemn tournaments were held by Edward III., 25 Sept. 1329, in London, and 19 Jan. 1344, at Windsor, and by Richard II. in Smithfield, London, 10 Oct. 1319, and also by Henry VIII., in May 1513. The Lateran council published an article against their continuance in 1136. Henry II. of France in a tilt with the comte de Montgomerie, had his eye struck out an accident which caused the king's death in a few days, 29 June, 1159. Tournaments were then abolished in France. A magnificent feast and tournament, under the auspices of Archibald, earl of Glamorgan, took place at Eglintoun castle, 29 Aug. 1639, and the following week many of the visitors (among whom was the late emperor of the French) assumed the characters of ancient knights, lady Seymour, aft. duchess of Somerset being the 'Queen of Beauty'. She died 14 Dec. 1884. Among the festivities at the marriage of prince Humbert, at Turin, was a tournament, 24 April, 1868. Tournaments held at the Agricultural hall, London, N. (for benefit of soldiers' widows, &c.) 21 June & 29 Aug. 1880, 11 June, 1887, 14 June, 1888, 20 June, 1889, 18 June, 1890, 26 May, 1891, 17 May, 1892. (Amount received by the charities 1880-3 about 21,000.) On Oct. 1883, these tournaments were organized as Royal Military Tournaments 'for development of skill in arms in the army. Tournaments on Woolwich Common, directed by Col. Curzon, 21-23 Aug. 1889.

TOURNAY (S. Belgium) was very flourishing till it was ravaged by the barbarians in the 5th century. It has sustained many sieges. Taken by the allies in 1709 and ceded to the house of Austria by the treaty of Utrecht, but the Dutch were allowed to place a garrison in it, as one of the barrier towns. It was taken by the French under general La Bourdonnaye, 8 Nov. 1792. Several battles were fought near Tournay in May, 1793 and May, 1794. Population, 1890, 35,403.

TOURNIQUET (from tourner, to turn) an instrument for stopping the flow of blood into a limb, by tightening the bandage employed in amputations, is said to have been invented by Morelli at the siege of Besançon, 1674. J. I. Petit, in France, invented the screw tourniquet in 1718.

TOURS, an ancient city, central France, near which Charles Martel gained a great victory over the Saracens, and saved Europe, 10 Oct. 732, and from which he acquired the name of Martel, signifying hammer. This conflict is also called the battle of Poitiers. When Paris was invested by the Germans, M. Crenieux and several of the members of the French government of defence went to Tours, together with the representatives of foreign powers, 18 Sept., 1870. On 9 Oct. these were joined by Gambetta, minister of the interior, afterwards of war (who escaped from Paris by a balloon, 7 Oct.). In consequence of the defeat of the army of the Loire near Orleans, the government removed to Bordeaux, 11 Dec.

TOWERS. That of Babel, the first of which we read, built in the plains of Shinar (Gen. xi) 2247 B.C., see Babel. The tower of the Winds at Athens, built 550 B.C. The Tower of Pharos (see Pharos), 280 B.C. The round towers in Ireland were the only structures of stone found at the arrival of the English, 1169, except some buildings in the maritime towns founded by the Danes. These towers are tall hollow pillars, nearly cylindrical but narrowing towards the top, pierced with lateral holes to admit the light, and covered with conical roofs. Fifty six of them still remain, from 50 to 130 feet high, see Pias.

TOWER OF LONDON. The tradition that Julius Cæsar founded a citadel here (about 54 B.C.) is very doubtful. A royal palace, consisting of no more than what is now called the White Tower, which appears to have been first marked out by William the Conqueror, 1066, was commenced in 1078, and completed by his son, William Rufus, who, in 1088, surrounded it with walls and a broad deep ditch. Successive monarchs made additions to it, and king Edward III. built the church. In 1638, the old White Tower was rebuilt, and under king Charles II., it was thoroughly repaired, 1680-5 and a great number of additional buildings made to it. Here are the Armoury, Jewel-office, and various other divisions and buildings of peculiar interest. Here took place many executions of illustrious persons, and many murders (king Henry VI. 1471, king Edward V. and his brother, 1483, sir Thomas Overbury 1613). The armoury and 280,000 arms and of arms, &c. were destroyed by fire 30 Oct. 1841. The New Buildings in the Tower were completed in 1850. See Sec. Lib., for Tower Libraries see Thomas. The more recent construction of the tower have been the duke of Wellington, Lord Combermere, and sir John Burgoyne. Sir George Pollock, constable Oct. 1871, died 6 Oct. 1872. Sir Wm. Gomm 31 Oct. 1872, died 15 March, 1875. Sir Charles York 1 April 1875, died 20 Nov. 1880. Sir W. Fenwick Williams April, 1881. Gen. Sir R. J. Daines Aug. 1881, died 6 Dec. 1888. Lord Napier of Magdala, Dec. 1886, died 14 Jan. 1890. Sir Daniel Lonsdale 3 March, 1890. The marriage long her was reserved to the Zoological Garden 1883. The state of the water removed to the R. and Office 1885. Opened to the public (Mondays and Saturdays) from 3 April 1885. Lanth. the Tow. a rebuilt and lost of restoration 1884-5. The White Tower and other parts actively managed by an English and French committee at 16 visitors seriously hurt about 21 in 24 Jan. 1. The Guild of Corpus Christi and Henry Dion 31 March 1884. 24 Jan. committed for trial 27 March 1885. See Trade. Tower Bridge at last passed 24 Aug. 1885. Foundation of the bridge laid by the prince of Wales at June 1886.

TOWN HOLDINGS in Great Britain and Ireland. A committee appointed in 1886-9 (Mr. Lewis 1st, Sir H. James, Sir Wm. Marriot and others), to enquire into terms of occupation, facilities for purchase by tenants, rating improvements, &c. The report issued 13 July, 1889, was stated to be a compromise.

Report of the committee dealing with questions relating to local taxation the liability of ground rents, &c. published 30 May, 1893.

TOWNLEY MARBLES, in the British Museum, were purchased in 1805 and 1814.

TOWTON (Yorkshire), where a sanguinary battle was fought, 29 March, 1461, between the houses of York (Edward IV.) and Lancaster (Henry VI.), to the latter of whom it was fatal, and on whose side more than 37,000 fell. Edward issued orders to give no quarter, and the most merciless slaughter ensued. Henry and his queen, Margaret, fled to Scotland, and Edward IV was settled on the throne.

TOXOPHILITES (from toxon, a bow, and philos, a lover), a society established by Sir Aston Lever in 1781. The Toxophilites formed a division of the Artillery Company about 1784-1803. In 1834 they took grounds in the inner circle of Regent's Park, and built the archery lodge. They possess a very curious piece of plate given by Catherine, queen of Charles II., to be shot for by the Finsbury Archers, of whom the Toxophilites are the representatives.

TRACT SOCIETIES The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge was founded in 1698. The Religious Tract Society, London, in 1799, and other similar societies since.

TRACTARIANISM, a term applied to certain opinions on church matters propounded in the 'Tracts for the Times' of which ninety numbers were published, 1833-41. The principal writers were the revs Dr L. Pusey, J. H. Newman, J. Keble, J. Froude, and I. Williams—all of the University of Oxford. see Puseyism. The tracts (especially No 90 ascribed to rev J. H. Newman) were condemned by the authorities at Oxford, 15 March, 1841.

TRACTION-ENGINES were used on common roads in London in 1860, but afterwards restricted. In Aug 1862 one of Bray's traction engines conveyed through the city a mass of iron which would have required 29 horses. see Road-steamers, and Railways.

TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN, see Exports and Imports. In 1861 the value of the two amounted to 377,017,522l. in 1871 to 614,590,180l., in 1875 to 655,551,900l. in 1877 to 646,567,021l., in 1879, 611,775,239l., in 1881, 691,105,264l., in 1883, 732,328,649l., in 1884, 685,946,152l., 1885, 642,442,263l., 1886, 615,822,935l., 1887, 643,490,449l., 1888, 686,213,284l., 1889, 713,230,274l., 1890, 748,944,115l. See Commerce.

Trade with the United States doubled in value in ten years. 1877 77,805,000l. 1878 89,070,000l. Royal commission for enquiry into causes of depression of trade. 31 Aug 1885. Parls of Liverpool and Dundee. Mr G. Webster Smith, 1 of Dundee. Price and quality there first notice, 7 Oct 1885. Final report issued Feb 1887. The majority refer to over production in 1880 a value of grain and raw, and to agriculture, full of prices as probable causes improved condition of the working classes in Jul 1887.

TRADE AND PLANTATIONS BOARD OF Cromwell seems to have given the first notions of a board of trade in 1653. He appointed Sir John Birchard, with many lords of his council judges and gentlemen, and about twenty merchants of London, York, Newcastle, Larnough, Dover &c. to meet and consider by what means the trade and navigation of the republic might be best promoted. Thomas's Notes of the Rolls (Charles II., on his restoration, established a council of trade for keeping a control over the whole commerce of the nation, 1660, he afterwards instituted a board of trade and plantations which was remodelled by William III. This board was abolished in 1782, and a new council for the affairs of trade on its present plan was appointed, 2 Sept 1786.

The parliamentary recommendation in 1880 to appoint a "minister of trade and commerce, was dropped by Mr Gladstone in March, 1882.

Board of trade journal of Lancet &c published 15 Sept. 1886.

TRADE MARKS REGISTRATION AOT passed 13 Aug 1875. The registration office, Quality-court Chancery-lane (Mr H. Reader Lack, registrar) was opened 1 Jan 1876 a similar act passed in the United States, 1881. See Merchandise Marks Act.

TRADES' MUSEUMS The formation of one was undertaken in 1853 jointly by the commissioners of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and the Society of Arts. The annual department was opened 17 May, 1855, when a paper on the mutual relations of trade and manufactures was read by professor E. Solty. The contents of this museum were removed to the South Kensington Museum, which was opened 24 June, 1857. The French 'Conservatoire des Arts et Manners' was established 1795.

TRADES UNIONS The steam engine makers' society, Manchester, established in 1824. By 6 Geo IV c 129 (1825), the combination laws were repealed and other provisions made. A trades' unions formed for mutual union, thermic of wages, &c., are not recognised by law, a commission (including Lord Lich, Thomas Hughes and others, with Sir Wm Eric as chairman) was appointed to inquire into their constitution 14 Feb 1867 and an act to facilitate their proceedings was passed 5 April following. Their reports were used during the year, disclosing the existence of numerous practices, with great intimidation, see Old field and Manchester. An act to protect union funds from embezzlement was passed in 1869. A trade union act passed 29 June, 1871, amended by act passed 30 June, 1876. To counteract the influence of trades' unions, the National Federation of Unemployers was formed Dec 1873 at Lough J. J. J., and Working men.

TRAFALGAR (Cap. S. Spain), off which a great naval victory was gained by the British, under Nelson over the combined fleets of France and Spain, commanded by Admiral Villeneuve and two Spanish admirals, 21 Oct 1805. The navy force was eighteen French and fifteen Spanish vessels, all of the line that of the British twenty-seven ships. After a protracted fight, Villeneuve and the other admirals were taken, and nineteen of their ships captured, sunk, or destroyed. Nelson was killed, and Admiral Collingwood succeeded to the command. Nelson's ship was the Victory, and his last signal was 'England expects every man will do his duty.' see Nelson. TRAFALGAR SQUARE, London, begun 1829 completed 1845. Act passed in 1844 declaring that the square is Crown property, the charge of it placed in the hands of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests and under police regulations. In 1851 the charge was transferred to the Commissioners of Works. The right of preventing public meetings in the square by the executive affirmed by the Commons (316-224), 2 March, 1888. Grand Hotel opened by Lord Mayor, 29 May, 1880. See Riots.

TRAINING SCHOOLS, begun by the National Society, 1811. One was founded at Battersea in 1840, by Sir J. Kay Shuttleworth, and Mr E. C. Tuffnell, the latter, who was then in the Poor Law Commission, devoting a year's salary towards the expense. Mr Mann stated, in 1855, that there were about forty of these schools in different parts of the country.

TRAJAN'S COLUMN (in Rome), erected 114, by the Roman senate and people, to commemorate his victories, and executed by Apollodorus. It was built in the square called the Forum Trajanum, it is of the Tuscan order, and from its base exclusive of the statue and pedestal, is 127½ feet high.

TRAM-ROADS. The name is probably derived from being made of trunks or bars of wood. The first one that it was derived from, Mr Benjamin Outram (the father of Sir James Outram, the Indian engineer), who improved the colliery railroad about 1800 is very doubtful. The first tram-road from Crofton to Wadsworth was completed on 24 July, 1801. Street railways or tramways for omnibuses drawn by horses previously established by Mr Mann in New York, were opened by him at Birkenhead, Cheshire, 30 Aug. 1860, and at Brixwater, London, 23 March, 1861 (See Ireland 1868). A street railway bill was rejected by the house of commons in April, 1861. Several of these railways existed for a time in various parts of the metropolis in 1861, but were all taken up in 1862. An act to facilitate the construction of tramways passed 9 Aug. 1870. Tramways from Brixton to Kennington, and from White-chapel to Bow were opened 9 May, 1870, and others since. Their introduction into the city was much recommended but opposed, March-May, 1873. Dividend of the North Metropolitan tramway company, 8 per cent Aug. 1876. The use of steam locomotives proposed approved in Paris, July, 1876.

Eleven street railways erected in New York, 1878. 233 miles of tramways constructed in England and Wales, 1870-80.

Steam-rail tramway on Highgate Hill, N. London (the first in Europe) opened 29 May, 1884.

An international tramway congress opened at Brussels, 5 Sept. 1888.

Mr Liffert's mode of traction on tramways by magnetic electricity was tried at Chiswick, 25 June, 1890. His patent had been purchased by a syndicate. Overhead electric tramway opened at Leeds, 29 Oct. 1891.

TRANQUEBAR (East Indies), the Danish settlement here, founded in 1618, was purchased by the English in 1845.

TRANSCASPIAN RAILWAY, see under Railways, 1888.

TRANSFIGURATION. The change of Christ's appearance on Mount Tabor, in the presence of Peter, James, and John, A.D. 32 (Matt. xvii.). The feast of the Transfiguration, kept on 6 Aug., was instituted in the East before 700, and seems to have been observed in the West as early as 450. Pope Calixtus III. in 1456 issued a bull making it a "feast of obligation" to be generally observed in honour of the defeat of the Turks at Belgrade in that year.

TRANSFORMATION PRINTS. A method of printing one picture over another, the former being usually effaced, patented by Mr Andrew Reid of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and others, 1885.

TRANSLATION TO HEAVEN. The translation of Enoch to heaven at the age of 365 years, 3017 B.C. The prophet Elijah was translated to heaven in a chariot of fire, 850 B.C.—The possibility of translation to the abode of eternal life, has been maintained by some extravagant enthusiasts. The Irish house of commons expelled Mr Agell from his seat, for his book asserting the possibility of translation to the other world without death, 1703.

TRANSPADANE REPUBLIC, comprising Lombardy and part of the Venetian territories, was established by Bonaparte after his victory at Lodi, 10 May, 1796. With the Cispadane republic, it merged into the Cisalpine republic, Oct. 1797.

TRANSPORTATION, see Banishment. Judgement given the power of sentencing offenders to transportation "into any of his majesty's dominions in North America," by 18 Charles II. c. 3 (1666), and by 4 Geo. I. c. 11 (1715). Transportation (created in 1775, but was revived in 1786). The reception of convicts was successfully refused by the Cape of Good Hope (in 1839) and by the Australian colonies (1864). Transportation, even to West Australia, where labour is wanted, ceased after a few years, through the fierce opposition of the eastern colonies. In consequence of the difficulty then experienced in transporting felons, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99 was passed to provide other punishment, namely, penal servitude, empowering her majesty to grant pardon to offenders under certain conditions, and licences to others to be at large such licences being liable to be revoked if necessary, and many have been. These licences are termed "tickets of leave." The system is said to have originated in Australia under the superintendence of Captain Macnechie. It was much assailed in 1811 and Nov. 1862, on account of violent crimes being traced to ticket-of-leavees, and was modified by the Penal Servitude Act, 1864, and the Prevention of Crimes Acts 1871 and 1879. It is now considered successful. See Crime.

John Fire, esq., a man of fortune, was sentenced to transportation for stealing a few quires of paper—Phillips 2 Nov. 1772.

The Rev. Dr. Halloran, tutor to the earl of Chesterfield, was transported for forging a bank note (and postage) 9 Sept. 1818.

The first transportation of felons to Botany Bay was in May 1787, where governor Phillip arrived with about 600 on 20 Jan. 1788, convicts were afterwards sent to Van Diemen's Land, Norfolk Island, &c.

Returning from transportation was punishable with death until 5 Will. IV. c. 67, Aug. 1834, when an act was passed making the offence punishable by transportation for life.

A shipment of convicts to West Australia (which had already received 10,000) in 1867.

TRANSUBSTANTIATION, the doctrine of the "real presence." That the bread and wine in the Eucharist are changed into the very flesh and blood of Christ by the consecration, was broached in the days of Gregory III (731), and accepted by Amalarius and Rabertus (about 830), but rejected by Rabanus Maurus, Johannes Scotus Erigena, Berengarius, Wulfhelm, and others. In the Lateran council, held at Rome by Innocent III, the word "Transubstantiation" was used to express this doctrine, which was decreed to be inconvertible, and all who opposed it were condemned as heretics. This was confirmed by the council of Trent, 18 Jan 1562. John Huss, Jerome of Prague, and other martyrs of the reformation, suffered for denying this dogma, which is renounced by the church of England (28th article), and by all protestant dissenters. The declaration against transubstantiation, invocation of the saints, and the sacrifice of the mass, on taking any civil office, was abolished by an act passed 25 July, 1867, see Sacrament.

Luther maintained the doctrine of consubstantiation, viz that after consecration the body and blood of Christ are substantially present in the bread and wine. He was opposed by Huter (austrian) Zwingle and others (termed sacramentarians) who asserted that the Io is supper is only a commemorative rite.

TRANSVAAL REPUBLIC, named South Africa Republic in 1853, founded by Dutch Boers (farmers) in 1848, after several years' severe conflict with the natives. Its independence was declared 17 Jan 1852, S J P Kruger elected president 7 May, 1853, and its constitution proclaimed 13 Feb 1858. Capital Pretoria. TRANSYLVANIA, an Austrian province, was part of the ancient Dacia (which see). In 1526, John Zapolj rendered himself independent of the emperor Ferdinand I by the aid of the Turks. His successors ruled with much difficulty till Jan 1699, when the emperor Leopold I, by the treaty of Carlowitz, finally incorporated Transylvania into the Austrian dominions. The Transylvanian deputies did not take their seat in the Austrian parliament till 20 Oct 1863. A decree for the convocation of the Transylvanian diet was issued 12 Sept 1865. The inhabitants are about 1,100,000, ignorant Roumans, 1,500,000 Hungarian colonists, and 550,000 Magyars, the last being the ruling class. The union of Transylvania with Hungary in 1848, which has caused much discontent, was ratified by the Transylvanian diet, 25 Dec 1866.

TRAPPISTS The first abbey of La Trappe in Normandy was founded, in 1140, by Rotrou, comte de Perche. The present order of Trappists owes its origin to the learned Jean le Bouthillier de la Hance (editor of Annéees when aged 14), who renounced the world and sold all his property, giving the proceeds to the abbey of La Trappe to which he retired in 1662, to live there in great austerity. After several efforts he succeeded in reforming the monks, and in establishing a new rule, which combined silence, private reading, and manual labour, and which forbids study, wine, &c. Rance was born in 1620, and died in 1700. The Trappists' new building, was consecrated in Aug 1833.

A number of these monks driven from France in the revolution of 1790, were received by Mr Wood of Dulworth, Dorsetshire, who gave them some land to cultivate and a habitation, where they remained till 1815. This order was charged with rebellion at Connaught in France, and sixty-four English and Irish Trappists were shipped by the French government at Pauillac 20 Nov and were landed from the Hotel French frigate, at Cork, 30 Nov 1831. They established themselves at Mount Mellick, county of Wexford.

TRAUTENAU (Bohemia) On 27 June, 1866, the first corps of the army of the crown-prince of Prussia seized Trautenu, but was defeated and repulsed by the Austrians under Gablenz on the 28th, the Prussians defeated the Austrians with great loss.

TRAVELLERS' CLUB (Pall-mall), established in 1815. A member must have "travelled out of the British islands to a distance of at least 500 miles from London, in a direct line."

TRAVELLING IN ENGLAND In 1707 it took, in summer one day, in winter nearly two days, to travel from London to Oxford (55 miles). In 1817 the journey was accomplished in six or seven hours. By the Great Western Railway express (63 miles) it is done in 1½ hour. In 1828, a gentleman travelled from Newcastle to London (273 miles) made the best coach in 35 hours, at an expense of 6l 15s 3d or 6d per mile (including dinner, &c.). In 1857, the charge of the Great Northern railway (254 miles) first-class express (6 hours) was 50s 9d.

TRAWLING, Deep-sea fishing with a boat (sometimes driven by steam) having a very large net attached to it, and thereby catching the fish which mostly live at the bottom of the sea, principally practised on the N.E. coast of Britain. Commissioners reported in 1864 and since that trawling was not injurious to the supply of fish as was alleged, but another commission with scientific advice, reported in Feb 1885 that there was some ground for the fishermen's complaints.

TREAD-MILL, an invention of the Chinese, to use water for the irrigation of the fields. The complicated tread-mill introduced into the prisons of Great Britain is the invention of Mr (afterwards Sir William) Cubitt, of Ipswich. It was erected at Brixton gaol 1817, and soon afterwards in other large prisons.

TREASON, see High Treason. PETTY TREASON (a term abolished in 1828, defined by the statute of 1251 de Hic 1352) was a wife's murder of her husband, a servant's murder of his master, and an ecclesiastical person's murder of his prelate or other superior.

TREASON-FELONY By the Crown and Government Security Act, 11 Vict c 12 (1848), certain treasons heretofore punishable with death were mitigated to felonies, and subjected to transportation or imprisonment. The Females in Ireland were tried under this act, see Trials, 1805.

TREASURER OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH, the third great officer of the crown, a lord by virtue of his office, having the custody of the king's treasure, governing the upper court of exchequer, and formerly sitting judicially among the judges. The first lord high treasurer in England was Odlo, earl of Kent, in the reign of William I. This great trust is now confided to a commission, and is vested in five persons, called "lords commissioners" for executing the office of lord high treasurer, and of whom the chancellor of the exchequer is usually one, the first lord being usually the premier, see Admiralty, for a succession of these officers. Sir Stafford Northcote (aft. Lord of Eddlesleigh) was first lord of the treasury and not premier, 24 June, 1855, as was Mr W. H. Smith, 26 July, 1886, see Salisbury Administrations. A third lord of the treasury (Mr Stanfield) was appointed, Dec 1868, succeeded by Mr W. H. Gladstone, Dec 1869.

The first of this rank in Ireland was John de St. John, Henry III. 1217, the last William duke of Devonshire, 1766. The treasurers were appointed till 1789, when commissioners till 1866, when the revenues of Great Britain and Ireland were united. The first lord high treasurer of Scotland was Sir Walter Ogilvie appointed by James I in 1420, the last, in 1644, John, earl of Traquair, afterwards commissioners were appointed.

TREBBIA, now Trebbia, a river in North Italy, near which Hannibal defeated the Roman consul Sempronius, 218 B.C.; and Suvarrow, after a struggle, defeated the French marshal Macdonald and compelled him to retreat, 17-19 June, 1799.

TREBIZOND, a port of Asia Minor in the Black Sea, was colonised by the Greeks, and became subject to the kings of Pontus. It enjoyed self-government under the Roman empire, and when the Latins took Constantinople in 1204, it became the seat of an empire which endured till 1461, when it was conquered by the Turks under Mahomet I. Population in 1885, 45,000.

TRECENTO, see Italian.

TREES in London. Many were planted by John Evelyn in the Mall, St. James's, &c. He recommended this in his "Famifugium," published 1661. The planting of rows of trees in suburban roads began in 1875.

TREZZO or Linzer were planted in Paris and other parts of France during the revolutionary era, 1790 and 1848. These trees were cut down in Paris in Jan. 1850, when riots ensued, put down by the military. The celebrated tree Fraser, planted in 1789 near the National Library, Paris, was felled early in 1884.

TRENT (the ancient Tridentum), in the Tyrol, belongs to Austria. The council held here is reckoned in the Roman catholic church as the 18th general council. Its decisions have been implicitly received as the standard of faith, morals, and discipline in that church. It first sat 13 Dec. 1545, and continued (with interruptions) under pope Paul III., Julius III., and Pius IV. to 4 Dec. 1563; its last sitting (the 25th). A jubilee in relation to this council was celebrated in June, 1863. Trent was 10 several times taken during the French war. Population, 21,653.

At this council was decreed, with anathemas: the canon of scripture (including the apocrypha), and the church its sole interpreter, the traditions to be equal with scripture, the seven sacraments (baptism, confirmation, the Lord's supper, penance, extreme unction, orders, and matrimony), transubstantiation; purgatory; indulgences; celibacy of the clergy; auricular confession, &c.

TRENT STEAMER, see United States, Nov.-Dec. 1861.

TREVECCA, see Cheshunt.

TREVES, or TRIER, the Roman Treviri, in Rhenish Prussia, was a prosperous city of the Gauls 12 B.C. The emperor Gallienus held his court here A.D. 255. The church of St. Simeon dates from the 4th century. Trèves was made an electorate in the 14th century, and became subject to the archbishop in 1585. Councils held here, 385-1423. The archbishopric is said to have been founded before the 7th century and to be the oldest in Germany. After various changes, Trèves was acquired by Prussia, June 1815. In 1844 much excitement was occasioned by miracles said to have been wrought by a "Holy Coat" in the cathedral. The coat was exhibited to thousands, Aug., Sept. 1891. Population, 1890, 36,162.

"TRIA JUNCTA IN UNO" (three joined in one), the motto of the knights of the military order of the Bath, signifying "faith, hope, and charity;" see Bath.

TRIAL AT BAR, signifies by the whole court or a plurality of judges. This plan was adopted at Bristol after the riots in 1832; also at O'Connell's trial, 1844; and arranged for the trial of the claimant of the Tichborne estates for perjury, in April, 1873. See Juries.

TRIALS. Regulations for conducting trials were made by Lothar and Edric, kings of Kent, about 673 to 680. Alfred the Great is said to have begun trial by jury; but there is good evidence of such trials before his time. Arrangements were made for more speedy trials by "the Winter Assizes Act," 1876. See Appeal.

- Gorham v. the Bishop of Exeter; ecclesiastical case, judgment given in the court of Arches against the plaintiff. 2 Aug. 1849
- The bishop had refused to institute the rev. Mr. Gorham, into the living of Brampton-Spoke, in Devonshire, alleging want of orthodoxy in the plaintiff, who denied that spiritual regeneration was conferred by laymen; the court held that the charge against the plaintiff of holding false doctrine was proved, and that the bishop was justified in his refusal. Mr. Gorham appealed to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which pronounced its opinion (8 March, 1850) that "the doctrine held by Mr. Gorham was not contrary or repugnant to the declared doctrine of the church of England, and that Mr. Gorham ought not, by reason of the doctrine held by him, to have been refused admission to the vicarage of Brampton-Spoke." This decision led to subsequent proceedings in the three courts of law, successively, for a rule to show cause why a prohibition should not issue, directed to the judge of the Arches court, and to the archbishop of Canterbury, against giving effect to the judgment of her majesty in council. The rule was refused in each court, and in the end Mr. Gorham was instituted into the vicarage in question. 7 Aug. 1850

- Faience Swynfen v. F. H. Swynfen, a will case; the will affirmed 27 July, 1859
- [The plaintiff was Faience Swynfen, widow of Henry John Swynfen, son of the testator, Samuel Swynfen. Her husband died 15 June, 1854, and his father on 16 July, following, having made a will 19 days before his death, devising the Swynfen estate (worth about 60,000l.) to his son's wife, but leaving a large amount of personal estate undivided. The defendant, F. H. Swynfen, son of the testator's eldest half-brother, claimed the estate as her-at-law on the ground of the testator's insanity. The issue was brought to trial in March, 1856, but proceedings were stayed by Mrs. Swynfen's counsel, Sir F. Thesiger, entering into an agreement with the opposite counsel, Mr. Alexander Colburn, without her consent, and in defiance of her instructions. After various proceedings, the court of chancery ordered a new trial. She gained her cause, mainly through the energy of her counsel, Mr. Chas. E. Kennedy, to whom she had promised to pay 20,000l. for his extraordinary services. Mrs. Swynfen, however, married a Mr. Brown, and repudiated Mr. Kennedy's claim. The latter, in an action against her, obtained a verdict in his favour on 29 March,

- 1865, which was, on appeal, finally reversed in Feb. 1864. Mrs. Swynburn was non-suited in an action brought against her counsel (afterwards Lord Chalmers and lord chancellor), in July, 1859, and June, 1860.]

TRIBUNES OF THE PEOPLE (Tribuni Plebis), magistrates of Rome, first chosen from among the commons to represent them, 494 B.C., when the people, after a quarrel with the senators, had retired to Mons Sacer. The first two tribunes were C. Licinius and L. Albinus; but their number was soon after raised to five, and 37 years after to ten, which number remained fixed. The office was annual, and as the first had been created on the 4th of the ides of December, that day was chosen for the election. In A.D. 1347, Niccolò di Rienzi assumed absolute power in Rome as tribune of the people, and reformed many abuses; but committing extravagances, he lost his popularity and was compelled to abdicate. He returned to Rome and was assassinated, 8 Sept. 1354.

TRICHINIASIS, a fatal disease, occasioned by eating raw or underdone pork containing a minute worm named Trichina spiralis. Professor Owen discovered these worms in cysts, in human muscles, in 1832. The trichinae are thoroughly destroyed by proper cooking. The disease excited much attention in 1865, and was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Thudichum at the Society of Arts on 18 April, 1866.

TRIMMER, a term applied to George Savile, earl of Halifax, and others who held similar political opinions, midway between those of the extreme Whigs and Tories, about the latter part of the 17th century. He assumed the title as an honour, asserting that it could be rightly given to the British constitution and church Macaulay says that Halifax was a trimmer on principle, and not a renegade. He died in 1695. See Opportunities.

TRINACRIA, a name of Sicily. The title "King of Trinacria," was temporarily assumed by Frederick II. (1302), and Frederick III. (1373).

TRINCOMALEE (Ceylon), was taken from the Dutch, by the English, in 1782; it was retaken by the French the same year; but was restored to the Dutch by the peace of 1783. It surrendered to the British, under colonel Stewart, 26 Aug. 1795, and was confirmed to England by the peace of Amiens, in 1802; see Ceylon. Of a series of actions off Trincomalee between sir Edward Hughes and the French admiral Suffren, one was fought 18 Feb. 1782, the enemy having eleven ships to nine; on 12 April following, they had eighteen ships to eleven, and on 6 July, same year, they had fifteen ships to twelve. In all these conflicts the French were defeated.

TRINIDAD, an island in the West Indies, discovered by Columbus in 1498, was taken from the Spaniards by sir Walter Raleigh in 1595; by the French from the English in 1766. Taken by the British, with four ships of the line, and a military force under command of sir Ralph Abercromby, to whom the island capitulated, 18 Feb. 1797; they captured two, and burnt three Spanish ships of war in the harbour. This possession was confirmed to England by the peace of Amiens in 1802. The insurrection of the negroes occurred 4 Jan. 1832. Population in 1861, 84,438; in 1881, 153,128; in 1891, 196,172. TUAM (W. Ireland) St Jarlath, the son of Lora, who lived abt 501, is looked upon as the first founder of the abbey of Tuam though the abbey is said to have been founded in 487. The church was anciently called tuam de Gualand. In 1157, Edan O'Hainin was the first archbishop, at least the first who received the pall, for some of his predecessors are sometimes called bishops of Connaught, and sometimes archbishops, by Irish historians. The see of 1410 was annexed to Tuam in 1599. Tuam is valued in the king's books, by an extent returned anno 28 Edw. 1, at 400 sterling per annum. Beaton It ceased to be archiepiscopal, conformably with the statute 3 & 4 Will IV. 1833, and is now a bishopric only, to which Killalea and Achomry, a joint see, has been added, - see Archbishops. TUBERCULOSIS, a disease caused by the development of tubercles, small masses of diseased matter in the lungs (phthisis or consumption), in the face and other parts (lupus).

Dr Robert Koch, of Berlin, announced in 1882, that he had discovered a minute organism, named bacillus tuberculosis, to whose action he attributed the disease. In the autumn of 1890 he reported his invention of a lymph (see below, 25 Jan 1891) by the injection of which into the system as in vaccination he hoped to cure the disease. In Berlin he made many experiments on tuberculous guinea pigs and human beings, with some success in respect of the former but not of the latter. He was much honoured by the emperor, and was aided by the state. Dr Koch's full account of his method was published in the British Medical Journal, London 25 Nov and other papers. Michael Neale fled to Berlin from all parts of the world, to obtain the lymph. He suggested cases of useful application were published, and it soon appeared that it was time to suspect the efficacy of the remedy. Much discomfited Dr Koch in 1895 Jan published the statement that his lymph named tuberculin, was a glycerine extract from the pure culture of the tubercle bacilli. Royal commission on the tubercle (Dr Koch's method &c) was appointed for the purpose of ascertaining the value of his method. It is a body of 12 members, and at present Robert Koch is Chairman. It has awarded that out of 100 surgical cases no perfect cure had been effected by the lymph. end of Jan 1896

Prof. Buchow, Berlin, in regard to 21 cases of infection of the lymph, reported unfavourable results.

Dr. Britan, Liej and Bernheim proposed the cure of tuberculosis by the transfusion of goat blood.

TUBULAR BRIDGES The Butina Tubular Suspension Bridge, the most wonderful enterprise in engineering in the world, was constructed 1846-50 (Mr R Stephenson and Mr Fairbairn, engineers), about a mile southward of the Menai Strait Suspension Bridge.

On the Bhattani rock near the centre of the Mesa about the surface which is about ten feet above low water level, I built a tube for him and fastened the huge stone immovable to him. Man, dog and in which two lines of tubes or hollow girders strong enough to bear their weight and taken turns in alighting the individuals on the abutments on each side. Each tube being more than a quarter of a mile in length. The height of the tube within is thirty feet at the Bhattani towers diminishing to twenty three feet at the abutments. The lifting of these tubes to their places was a most gigantic operation, successfully performed.

TUESDAY, in Latin Dies Martis, the day of Mars, the third day of the week, so called from Twisto, Tivv, or Tuesco, a Saxon deity, worshipped on this day. Twisto is mentioned by Tacitus; see Week Days.

TUGENDBUND ("league of Virtue"), formed in Prussia soon after the peace of Tilsit, June, 1807, ostensibly for relieving the sufferers by the late wars, and for the revival of morality and patriotism. Its head-quarters were at Königsberg. It excited the jealousy of Napoleon, who demanded its suppression in 1809. It was dissolved at the peace in 1815.

TUILERIES (Paris), the imperial palace of France, commenced by Catharine de Medici, after the plans of Philibert de l'Orme, 1564; continued by Henry IV.; and finished by Louis XIV. This palace was stormed by the mob, 10 Aug. 1792; and ransacked in the revolutions of July, 1830, and Feb. 1848. Louis Napoleon made it his residence in 1851, and greatly renovated it. The restoration of the Tuileries (much injured by fire by the communists, May 1871) was determined on, Oct. 1872; not proceeded with. The ruins were sold for 32,200 l. to M. Picard, 4 Dec. 1882.

TULCHAN BISHOPS: a mere nominal episcopacy set up in Scotland by the regent Morton, who, with other nobles, absorbed the larger portion of the revenues, 1572-3. Tulchan was a stuffed calf's skin set before a cow to facilitate milking.

TULIPS, indigenous in the east of Europe, came to England from Vienna about 1578. It is recorded in the register of Alkmaar in Holland, that in 1639, 120 tulips, with the offsets, sold for 90,000 florins; and that one, called the Viceroy, sold for 4203 guilders! The States stopped this ruinous traffic. The tulip tree, Liriodendron tulipifera, was brought to England from America, about 1663.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS (Kent). The springs were discovered, it is stated, by Dudley, lord North, who, when very ill, was restored to health by the use of the waters, 1606. The wells were visited by the queens of Charles I. and II., and by queen Anne, and soon became fashionable. Population, 1881, 24,119; 1891, 27,895.

The town was incorporated by royal charter early in 1889.

TUNGSTEN (also called wolfram and scheelium), a hard whitish brittle metal. From tungstate of lead, Scheele in 1781 obtained tungstic acid, whence the brothers De Luyart in 1786 obtained the metal. In 1859 it was employed in making a new kind of steel.

TUNIS (N. Africa) stands nearly on the site of Carthage. Tunis was besieged by Louis IX., of France, who died near it 25 Aug. 1270. It remained under African kings till taken by Barbarossa, for Solymán the Magnificent, 1531. Barbarossa was expelled by the emperor Charles V., when 10,000 Christian slaves were set at liberty, June, 1535. The country was recovered by the Turks under Selim II. 1575. The bey of Tunis was first appointed in 1574; Tunis was reduced by admiral Blake, on the bey refusing to deliver up the British captives, 1655. The Hussein dynasty was founded 1705. In July, 1856, the bey agreed to make constitutional reforms. He died 22 Sept. 1859; and his brother and successor Mohamed-es-Sadok took the oath of fidelity to the constitution. TUNNAGE AND POUNDAGE were ancient duties levied on every tun of wine and pound of other goods, imported or exported, and were the origin of our "customs." They commenced in England about 1346, and were granted to the kings for life, beginning with Edward IV. Charles I. gave great offence by levying them on his own authority, 1628. They were granted to Charles II. for his lifetime, 24 June, 1660. By the act 27 Geo. III. c. 13, these and other duties were repealed, 1787; and new arrangement of excise and customs was introduced.

TUNNELS, for drainage, are ancient. The earliest tunnel for internal navigation was executed by M. Riguet, in the reign of Louis XIV., at Beziers in France. The first in England was by Mr. Brindley, on the duke of Bridgewater's canal, near Manchester, about 1766. Project of the Gravesend tunnel, 1800—the report upon it, 1801. The Thames Tunnel was projected by Mr. Brunel in 1823, and opened for foot passengers, 25 March, 1843; see Thames Tunnel. Innumerable tunnels have been made for railways. The railway tunnel at Liverpool was completed in the middle of 1829, lit up with gas, and exhibited once a week. On the London and Birmingham railway there are eight tunnels (the Primrose-hill, Watford, Kilbury, &c.), their total length being 7336 yards. Smiles. It was computed by Mr. Fowler, that there were 80 miles of tunnels in the United Kingdom in 1865, which cost about 6,500,000*l.*, at the average of 45*l.* a yard; see Alps [Mont Cenis, etc.] and Thames.

TURAN, see Turkistan.

TÜRKHEIM, see Turkheim.

TURIN, the ancient Augusta Taurinorum in Piedmont, capital of the Sardinian States, and of the kingdom of Italy, till 1864, when it was superseded by Florence. Its importance dates from the permanent union of Savoy and Piedmont in 1416. The French besieged this city; but prince Eugène defeated their army, and compelled them to raise the siege, 7 Sept. 1706. In 1798, the French republican army took possession of Turin, seized all the strong places and arsenals of Piedmont, and obliged the king and his family to remove to the island of Sardinia. In 1799, the French were driven out by the Austrians and Russians; but the city and all Piedmont surrendered to the French, June 1800. In May 1814, it was restored to the king of Sardinia, see Italy, 1864. Hereprince Humbert was married to his cousin Margherita amidst great rejoicing, 22 April, 1868. The monument to Cavour was inaugurated, 8 Nov 1873. An exhibition opened by the king, 25 April, 1880. See France, and Italy, 1884. Population, 1890, 320,808.

TURKESTAN, called by the Persians Turan, Independent Tartary, the original country of the Turks, in Central Asia, was reached by Alexander, 331 B.C. The Russians are gradually encroaching on this country, on 14 Feb. 1805, a new province Turkestan, was created by decree, and gun Kauffmann made governor, 26 July, 1807, died 16 May 1882. The rule of the czar accepted by the chief tribes at Merv, (which see), announced 8 Feb. 1884.

TURKEY The Turks were originally a tribe of Tartars, but, by incorporation with the peoples they have conquered, have become a mixed race. About 760, they obtained possession of a part of Armenia, called from them Turcomania. They gradually extended their power, but in the 13th century, being harassed by other Turkish tribes, they returned to Asia Minor. The Turkish empire till 1878 comprehended the almost independent principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia, Servia and Montenegro, the hereditary vicereignty of Egypt, and Tunis. The Turkish quadrilateral fortresses were Shumla, Varna, Silistria, and Rustchuk. The population of the empire was estimated in 1887 at 32,974,100. (Immediate Possessions 21,633,000, tributaries and protectorates 11,345,100, in Europe, 8,087,000 and 16,173,100, Africa, 7,817,000. By the treaty of Berlin (13 July, 1878) Turkey is said to have

If we exclude the provinces "indefinitely" to be occupied by Austria, Bulgaria, and Eastern Roumelia, there remain to Turkey in Europe only 74,790 square miles, with 4,779,000 inhabitants of whom 2,521,500 are Mohammedans. In Armenia Russia takes 10,000 square miles, with about 350,000 inhabitants. Cyprus, entrusted to the keeping of England, has an area of 3,749 square miles, and 186,173 inhabitants in 1881. The ally ceded to Greece by convention, 24 May, treaty signed, 2 July, 1881.

TURKEY TRADE, commenced in the year 1550. The Turkey or Levant Company of London was instituted by charter of Elizabeth, in 1579.

TURKEYS AND GUINEA FOWLS, first brought to England about 1523, and to France in 1570. Turkeys are natives of America, and were consequently unknown to the ancients.

TURKHEIM (E. France). Here the elector of Brandenburg and the Imperialists were defeated by the French under Turenne, 5 Jan. 1675.

TURKISH BATHS, see Baths.

TURKISH COMPASSIONATE FUND, instituted by the Daily Telegraph, and supported by lady Burdett-Coutts, the abp. of Canterbury, and others, to relieve sufferers by the war, Aug. 1877.

TURKOMANS, see White Sheep, and Turkoman.

TURNER'S ACT, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35 (1850), relates to the court of chancery.

TURNER'S LEGACIES. Joseph M. W. Turner, a great landscape painter, was born in April, 1775, and died 19 Dec. 1851. He bequeathed to the nation all the pictures and drawings collected by him and deposited at his residence, 47, Queen Anne-street, London, on condition that a suitable gallery should be erected for them within ten years; and directed his funded property to be expended in founding an academy at Twickenham for decayed artists. The will was disputed by his relatives, but a compromise was made. The oil-paintings (100 in number) and the drawings (1400) were obtained by the nation, and the engravings and some other property were transferred to the next of kin. The drawings were cleaned and mounted under the careful superintendence of Mr. Runkin, and the pictures were sent to Marlborough-house for exhibition. In 1861, many of the pictures were removed from the South Kensington Museum to the National Gallery, others in 1869. The sketches, plates, &c., of Turner's Liber Studiorum, were sold for about 20,000*l.* 28 March, 1873.

TURNING, see Laths. In our dockyards, blocks and other materials for our ships of war are now produced by an almost instantaneous process, from rough pieces of oak, by the machinery of Mr. (afterwards Sir Mark Isambard) Brunel (died 1849); see Blocks.

TURRPIKES, see Tolls.

TURPENTINE TREE, Pistacia Terebinthus, came from Barbary, before 1656. Spirits of turpentine were first applied, with success, to the rot in ships; one-third of the spirit diluted with two-thirds water, 1772.

TURRET SHIPS, see Navy of England.

TUSCAN ORDER OF ARCHITECTURE, a debased Doric, used in Tuscany for buildings in which strength is chiefly required Wotton

TUSCANY, formerly a grand duchy in Central Italy, the northern part of the ancient Etruria (which see). It formed part of the Lombard kingdom, after the conquest of which by Charlemagne, 774, it was made a marquisate for Boniface about 828. His descendant, the great countess Matilda, bequeathed the southern part of her domains to the popo (1115). In the northern part (then called Tuscia), the cities, Florence, Pisa, Sienna, Lucca, &c., gradually became flourishing republics. Florence became the chief under the government of the Medici family, see Florence. The duchy in that family began in 1531, and the grand-duchy in 1569. After the extinction of the Medici in 1737, Tuscany was given by the treaty of Vienna (1738) to Francis, duke of Lorraine (married to Maria Theresa of Austria in 1736), who had ceded his hereditary estates to France. Population in 1882, 2,226,265. Population, 1890 2,274,191.

TUSCULUM (now Frascati), a city of Latium (S Italy). The Tuscans supported Terminus Superbus against the Romans, by whom they were totally defeated, 498 B.C. The Tuscans, on account of their friendship with Rome, suffered much from the other Latins, who took their city, 374, but were severely chastised for it. Here Cato during his retirement wrote his "Tusculan Disputations," about 46 B.C.

TWELFTH-DAY, the feast of the Epiphany, or manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, 6 Jan; see Epiphany

TWELVE TABLES, see Decemviri

TWINS, joined together, have been born frequently, but seldom lived long. Helen-Judith, joined at the navel, were born in 1715, and died in 1723. Millic-Christine, negro twins born in North Carolina in 1851, were wholly distinct in the upper part of the body, but one in the lower part of the spinal column and pelvis, the four legs obeying nerve from a common centre. They sang and danced well, and were named the "Two-headed Nightingale." The will, understanding, and conscience were distinct. Exhibited in London 17 Feb 1885. See Siamese Twins

TWIN-SHIP, see under Storm

"TWO PENNY TRASH", a term given to W. Cobbett's Weekly Political Register, after 2 Nov. 1816, when he reduced the price from 12d to 2d, the sale greatly increased.

TYBURN (W London), at the west end of Oxford road (now street), the chief place in London for the execution of malefactors till 1783. Pennant (who died 1798) remembered Oxford-street as "a deep, hollow road, and full of sloughs, with here and there a ragged house, the lurking-place of cut-throats."

In conformity with an act passed in 1697, a so-called "Tyburn ticket" was given to the prosecutor of a criminal executed at Tyburn. The ticket gave exemptions from serving on juries and parochial offices. The act was repealed in 1818.

"TYBURNIA" (a NW suburb of London), was built between 1839 and 1840, on the green fields and nursery grounds in Paddington belonging to the see of London.

TYLER'S INSURRECTION, in opposition to the poll-tax imposed on all persons above 15, 5 Nov 1380. One of the collectors, acting with indecent rudeness to Wat Tyler's daughter, was struck dead by the father, June, 1381. His neighbours took arms, and in a short time almost the whole of the population of the southern and eastern counties rose, extorting freedom from their lords, and plundering. On 12 June, 1381, they gathered upon Blackheath to the number of 100,000 men, and on 14 June murdered Simon of Sudbury, archbishop of Canterbury, and sir Robert Hales, the royal treasurer. The king, Richard II., invited Tyler to a parley, which took place on the 15th at Smithfield, where the latter addressed the king in a menacing manner, now and again lifting up his sword. On this the mayor, Watworth, stunned Tyler with a blow of his mace, and one of the king's knights named Cavendish, dispatched him. Richard temporised with the multitude by promising a charter, and thus led them out of the city, when sir K. Knollys and a band of knights attacked and dispersed them with much slaughter. The insurrection in Norfolk and Suffolk was subdued by the bishop of Norwich, and 1500 of the rebels were executed.

TYNDALE MEMORIAL. A statue of William Tyndale, protestant martyr, translator of the new testament, published 1525, was set up on the Thames Embankment in 1883. Sculptor, Mr. J. E. Boehm.

TYNEMOUTH, Northumberland. Here are remains of a monastery built by king Edwin, 625; destroyed by the Danes; rebuilt by king Egfrid, 671-85; often ravaged by Danes, 795-993; refounded and made a castle by Rob. de Mowbray, 1090; plundered by Scots, 1316 and 1389; fortified for Charles I., 1642; taken by Scots, 1644; finally ruined, 1665; and made a depot, 1783. The chapel has been restored. Tynemouth was made a borough, returning one member to parliament, 1832. An aquarium, with r-garden, &c., was opened, 27 Aug. 1878. Population, 1881, 44,118; 1891, 46,267.

TYPE-COMPOSING MACHINES, see under Printing, 1842-72.

TYPE-FOUNDING, see under Printing, 1452, 1720.

TYPE-WRITERS. M. Fourcault sent to the Paris exhibition of 1855, a writing-machine for the blind; and several were invented by Wheatstone. After successive improvements, Messrs. Remington, in America, in 1873, contrived to construct 25,000. The speed is said to have been raised to seventy-five words a minute.

The action of the typewriter somewhat resembles that of a pianoforte. Pressure upon a key raised with a letter raises a hammer with a type-cut letter, which presses upon paper; provision is made for making the type, shifting, &c.

The Hall type-writer exhibited in London, 1883. Mr. R. Pearcock's new compact and expeditious type writer exhibited in April, 1885.

T. G. and H. Daws's type-writer for reporters commended May, 1885.

The "Simpler" type-writer (cost about 20s. 6d.) introduced into London by a company April, 1887.

A speed contest with the Remington type-writer at St. James's Hall: several prizes awarded by the proprietors Messrs. Wyckoff & Co. Jan. 1889.

The Bar-Jock type-writer exhibited by Messrs. Richardson & Co., in London, 14 Dec. of 1891, 1889.

TYRANT. In early Greek history, the term was applied to any man who governed with irresponsible power. Solon objected to the term, and chose the name Archon (ruler), 594 B.C. The earliest tyrants were those at Sicily, beginning with Cleisthenes, in the 7th century B.C. Tyranny declined in Greece about 490 B.C., and revived after the close of the Peloponnesian war, 404 B.C.; see Thirty Tyrants.

TYRE (Phœnicia), a great city, said to have been first built by Agenor. Another city was built 1257 (about 2267, Hales) B.C. It was besieged by the Assyrians, who retired from before it, after a siege of upwards of five years, 713 B.C. Taken by Nebuchadnezzar, 572 B.C., and the city demolished, when the Tyrians removed to an opposite island, and built a new and magnificent city. It was taken by Alexander with much difficulty, after a siege of seven months, July, 332 B.C. He joined the island to the continent by a mole. Strabo. Tyre was captured by the Crusaders, 7 July, 1124; by the French, 3 April, 1709; and by the allied fleet, during the war against Mehmet Ali, 1841.

TYRE, ERA OF, began on 19 Oct. 125 B.C., with the month of Hyperboreus. The months were the same as those used in the Grecian era, and the year is similar to the Julian year. To reduce this era to ours, subtract 124; and if the given year be less than 125, deduct it from 125, and the remainder will be the year before Christ.

TYROL, the eastern part of ancient Rhætia, now a province of the Austrian empire, was ceded to the house of Hapsburg in 1363 by Margaret, the heiress of the last count. It became an appanage of the younger (or Tyrol) branch of the imperial house, which came to the throne in the person of Maximilian II., in 1618. The French conquered the Tyrol in 1805, and united it to Bavaria; but in 1809 an insurrection broke out, headed by Andrew Hofer, an innkeeper, who drove the Bavarians out of the Tyrol, thoroughly defeated some French detachments, but laid down his arms at the treaty of Vienna. He was subsequently accused of corresponding with the Austrians, captured and sent to Mantua, and there shot by order of the French government, 20 Feb. 1810. The Austrian emperor ennobled his family in 1819, and erected his statue in Innsbruck in 1834. The Tyrolese riflemen were very effective in the Italian war in 1859. The Arlberg tunnel railway from Innsbruck to Bregenz inaugurated by the emperor 20 Sept. 1884. Population in 1890, 812,696.

TYRONE (near Ulster, N. Ireland), formerly the territories of the O'Neills, and the seat of the insurrection in 1641.

TYRRHENI, included the ancient Etruscans, and other tribes, said to have come from Lydia, Asia Minor.

ULPHILASS BIBLE, see under Bible

ULSTER the N. division of Ireland After the death of Strongbow, 1176, John de Courcy was made earl of Ulster, Hugh de Lacy was earl, 1243, and Walter d. Burgh, 1264, whose descendant, Elizabeth, married Lionel, son of Edward III., 1352 He thus became earl of Ulster In 1611, the British colonisation of the forfeited lands (termed the Ulster settlements or plantations) began much land being granted to the corporation of London, see Irish Society The consequent rebellion of the Irish chieftains, Roger More, Phelim O'Neill, McGuire, earl of Inniskillen and others, broke out on 23 Oct 1641 (see Ireland)—Ulster King of Arms appointed for Ireland, 1553—By the ancient "Ulster tenant-right," the outgoing tenant of a farm received from his successor a sum of money for the privilege of occupation A modified form of this right was adopted in the Irish land act, passed 8 July, 1870

The ULSTER CONVENTION, proposed 8 April, met at Belfast 27 June 1882 in a large pavilion erected for the purpose. 12,000 delegates of various classes and opinions from all parts of the province with many other persons were present the duke of Abercorn being in the chair The proceedings, which were of a grave earnest character began with a prayer and the singing of part of Psalm 134 Five resolutions for firmly maintaining the Union of Great Britain and Ireland in opposition to the scheme for Home Rule were passed unanimously

Ulster Organisation League formed (3,000 subscribed), 2 Aug 1892

ULTRAMONTANISTS (from ultra montes, beyond the mountains), a term originally applied in France to those who upheld the extreme authority of the pope in opposition to the freedom of the Gallican church, which had been secured by various bulls, and especially by the concordat of 15 July, 1801. Ultramontanists now are those who maintain the official infallibility of the bishop of Rome.

ULUNDI, Zululand, South Africa. On 4 July, 1879, the Zulus, commanded by their king, Cetshwayo, who had refused the conditions of peace, were totally defeated near here by Lord Chelmsford, after a severe conflict. Capt Wyatt-Edgell, 17 Lancers, and 9 men were killed, and about 53 wounded. The British were attacked in the open country by the Zulus, who enveloped our hollow square and charged on all sides up to within 60 yards, when they broke and fled under the heavy fire. They were pursued and routed by cavalry. About 23,000 Zulus engaged, 1,500 killed. The British showed much firmness and the Zulus displayed great courage. The royal kraal at Ulundi and other military kraals were burnt.

UMBRELLA, described in early dictionaries as "a portable pent-house to carry in a person's hand to screen him from violent rain or heat." Umbrellas appear in the carvings at Persepolis. Niebuhr saw a great Arabian prince returning from a mosque, he and each of his family having a large umbrella carried by his aide. Old Chinese records show the Chinese shrouded by umbrellas. It is said that the first person who generally used an umbrella in the streets of London was the benevolent Jonas Hanway, who died in 1786.

John Macdonald, a footman who wrote his own life, in forms up that he had "a fine silk umbrella which he brought from Spain but he could not with any comfort to himself use it the people calling out, 'Frenchman! why don't you get a coach?' The hackney coachmen and charmen were clamorous against their rival. The footman says he 'persevered for three months till they took no further notice of him.' Foreigners began to use them and then the English.

Mr Samuel Fox, inventor of the hitherto-staple jargon frame, strong light, and elastic having made a great fortune, especially at Lille in France, died 25 Feb. 1887. In 188, Mr Gladstone's political programme was termed his umbrella, by Lord Rosebery.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN," a story by Mrs H. Beecher-Stowe, published in portions in a newspaper in 1850, complete in March, 1852; setting forth the evils of negro slavery. The sale was enormous, and the translations numerous, and it greatly contributed to emancipation. The Rev. Josiah Henson, the original "Uncle Tom," was received by the queen at Buckingham palace, 2 March, 1877, and was much benefited by his visit to Britain; he died May, 1883, aged 93.

UNION, EXTREME, see Anomizing.

UNDULATORY THEORY OF LIGHT, supposes a progressive wave-like motion between the eye and the luminous body seen. It is said to have been suggested by Francesco Grimaldi about 1665, and was propounded by Robert Hooke and Huyghens, about 1672; opposed by Newton; but confirmed by Thomas Young by experiments in 1801, and is now generally adopted. UNIFORMITY ACTS. That of 2 & 3 Edward VI., 15 Jan. 1549, ordained that the order of divine worship, drawn up by Cranmer and others, "with the aid of the Holy Ghost," should be the only one used after 20 May. The penalties for refusing to use it were fine and imprisonment. This act was confirmed in 1552, repealed by Mary, 1554, and re-enacted by Elizabeth in 1559. The act of Uniformity, 14 Charles II. c. 4, was passed in 1662. It enjoined uniformity in matters of religion, and obliged all clergy to subscribe to the thirty-nine articles, and use the same form of worship, and same book of common prayer. Its enforcement on 24 Aug. 1662 termed Black Bartholomew's day, caused, it is said, upwards of 2000 ministers to quit the church of England. This day was commemorated by dissenters in 1862. The Act of Uniformity Amendment act, whereby shortened services were authorized, and other changes made, was passed 18 July, 1872. The Uniformity of Process act, which made many law changes, was passed 23 May, 1832.

UNIFORMS. Military uniforms were first used in France, "in a regular manner" by Louis XIV. about 1668. In England the uniform was soon afterwards adopted in the military service, but with little analogy to the modern dress. See under Navy.

UNIGENITUS, see Bull.

UNINFLAMMABLE SALTS. At the British Association, 15 Sept. 1859, MM. Vermaann and Oppenheim announced their discovery that fabrics steeped in solutions of tungstate of soda, or sulphate or phosphate of ammonia, burn without flame.

UNION JACK The original flag of England was the banner of St George &c white with a red cross, which, 12 April, 1606 (three years after James I ascended the throne) was incorporated with the banner of Scotland, &c, blue with a white diagonal cross. This combination obtained the name of "Union Jack, in allusion to the union with Scotland, and the word Jack is considered a corruption of the word Jacobus, Jacques, or James. This arrangement continued until the union with Ireland, 1 Jan 1801, when the banner of St. Patrick, &c, white with a diagonal red cross, was amalgamated with it and forms the present Union flag

UNION CHARGEABILITY ACT, providing for the better distribution of the charge for relieving the poor in unions, was passed in June, 1865. One object of the act is the improvement of the dwellings of agricultural labourers

UNION RELIEF ACT, passed in 1862, contained in 1863 to enable boards of guardians of certain unions to obtain temporary aid to meet the extraordinary expenditure for relief occasioned by the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts

UNITARIANS, termed Socinians from Laelius
Socinus, who founded a sect in Italy about 1546.
They profess to believe in and worship one only self-existent God, in opposition to those who worship the Trinity in unity. They consider Christ to have been a mere man, and do not admit the need of an atonement or of the complete inspiration of the Scriptures. Michael Servetus printed a tract in disparagement of the doctrine of the Trinity. In 1553, proceeding to Naples through Geneva, Calvin induced the magistrates to arrest him on a charge of blasphemy and heresy. Servetus, refusing to retract his opinions, was condemned to the flames, which sentence was carried into execution, 27 May, 1553. Servetus is numbered among those anatomi-sts who made the nearest approach to the doctrine of the circulation of the blood, before Harvey established that doctrine. Matthew Hamont was burnt at Norwich for asserting Christ not to be the Son of God, 1 June, 1579. The Unitarians were numerous in Transylvania in the 17th century, they came to England about 1700, and many of the original English presbyterian churches became Unitarian about 1730. They were not included in the Toleration act till 1813. There were 229 congregations in England in 1851. Their tenets resemble those of the Arians and Socinians (which see).

The Unitarian marriage bill was passed, June, 1827.
In Dec 1833, by a decision of the vice-chancellors
the Unitarians (as such) lost the possession of lady Howick's charity; the decision was affirmed on appeal in 1842. British and Foreign Unitarian Association founded to promote Unitarianism, 1825, meeting in London. 64th anniversary kept in London, 12 June 1889. There were 320 Unitarian churches in the United Kingdom in Feb 1884.

UNITED EMPIRE TRADE LEAGUE, formed for the advancement of British industry throughout the world by abandoning free trade doctrines and substituting a differential tariff for colonial produce. This scheme which was originated by Mr. Holfenr, was opposed by Mr. Thomas Farrer and others in London, March 1891. First annual report by Col. Howard Vincent. There are 5120 members April, 1892.

UNITED IRISHMEN a political society founded in 1791, was at first loyal, but afterwards met secretly, to establish a republic, became active in 1795. Theobald Wolf Tone, the founder, was captured by Mr. John Warren in the Joaze, one of six frigates destined to support the rebellion in Oct.
1798. He was executed by gunshot in prison Nov 1798.

UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION,
-ROYAL, Whitehall, London, was established in 1831. Its museum contains many remarkable military and naval relics. The lectures given are reported in its journal, which first appeared in 1857. The Institution first met in the Whitehall Chapel Royal, which see 7 March, 1891.

The United Service Gazette first published 9 Feb. 1833.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA were so styled by the congress of the revolted British provinces, 9 Sept. 1776. Their flag was declared to be thirteen stripes, alternately red and white and thirteen stars in a blue field, corresponding with the then number of states of the union, 30 June, 1777. There are now 44 states. The government of the United States is a pure democracy. Each of the states has a separate and independent legislature for the administration of its local affairs, but all are ruled in matters of imperial policy by two houses of legislature, the senate, elected for six years, and the house of representatives (356 members in 1891) elected for two years, to which delegates are sent from the different members of the confederacy. The president of the United States is elected every fourth year by the free voice of the people. He and his ministers have no seat in the legislative assemblies. His veto may be nullified by the vote of two-thirds of the house. The election of Abraham Lincoln as president on 4 Nov. 1860, was followed by the secession of eleven slaveholding states, and led to the great civil war, 1861-5; see Confederates, and below.

The thirteen states of the union at the declaration of independence in 1776; the italics indicate the then slaveholding states; those with a * prefixed seceded from the federal government in 1860 and 1861, and were subjoined in 1865.

1850	2,000,050	12,838,670	3,954,801	31,445,950

The Census of 1880 thus classifies the population:—Males, 25,518,300, females 24,650,663. Native born, 43,475,340, foreign born, 6,679,043. Whites, 43,400,970, coloured, 6,580,793. The remaining 339,098 are composed of Indians not in tribal relations and under Government care, Chinese, and other Asiatics. The Chinese are estimated at 105,673.

The senate is composed of 2 members for each state, elected for 6 years. The representatives in congress were formerly elected for 2 years in the ratio of 1 in 33,423 persons (five slaves were counted as three persons), but this system ended with the abolition of slavery. In 1875 the number of representatives was raised from 233 to 283, to commence 3 March, 1873.

ARMY—That which achieved independence was disbanded at the end of the war. In 1789, a war department was established, and in 1790 the army consisted of 1216 men for the Indian frontier. In 1808, the militia was newly equipped. When war with Great Britain was declared on 18 June, 1812, 35,000 men were voted; and the army was disbanded at the peace in 1813. Armies were voted for the wars in 1813 and 1815; afterwards disbanded.

- John Brown, called Captain Brown and old Brown, was a prominent leader in the violent conflicts in Kansas, during the agitation respecting the question of its becoming a slave state. He was a romanticist on the slavery question, and contended that all means for annihilating slavery were justifiable. He gathered together a band of desperate characters who so much annoyed Missouri and other slave states, that a reward was offered for his head. He had arranged for the successful raising of the insurrection above mentioned, so far as to derive a provisional government and a new constitution. On 16 Oct. he and his band, aided by a mob, seized the arsenal at Harper's Ferry, a town on the borders of Virginia and Maryland, stopped the railway trains, and cut the telegraph wires; a conflict with the military ensued, when many of the insurgents were killed. UNIVERSALISTS, who believe in the final salvation of all men. This doctrine, declared in the Talmud, and ascribed to Origen, about 230, was advocated by other early fathers, but opposed by St. Augustine, about 420; and condemned by the 5th general council at Constantinople, May, June, 553. It was received by the Unitarians in the 17th century, and avowed by numerous clergymen of the church of England. James Kelly, who published his "Union" in 1760, founded the sect of Universalists in Britain; and John Murray, in America, about 1770. The sect barely exists in Britain, but flourishes in America.

UNIVERSAL REVIEW, edited by Mr. Harry Quilter, devoted to fine art, literature, &c., first published 15 May, 1888. Publication ceased Dec. 1890.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE (Plébiscitum), one of the six points of the charter (see Chartists), was adopted by the French in their constitution of 1791; and used in the election of their president in 1851, and of their emperor in 1852; and by the Italian States in voting for annexation to Sardinia in 1860, 1861, 1866, and 1870.

UNIVERSAL TIME, see under Day.

UNIVERSITIES. The most ancient in Europe are said to be those of Bologna, Oxford, Cambridge, Paris, and Salamanca. In old Aberdeen was a monastery, in which youths were instructed in theology, the canon law, and the school philosophy, at least 200 years before the university and King's College were founded; see Degrees. USES, STATUTE OF, 27 Hen VIII c 10 (1535-6), see Charitable Uses

USHANT, an island near Brest, N.W. France, near which two naval battles were fought between the British and French fleets

(1) On 27 July 1758 after an indecisive action of three hours the French under Corder de la Motte withdrew to the harbour of Brest. Admiral Kappell commanded the English fleet the count d'Orvilliers the French. The failure of a complete victory was attributed to admiral Sir Hugh Palliser's non-compliance with the admiral's signals. Palliser preferred articles of accusation against his commander who was tried and acquitted and the charge against him declared to be malicious and ill founded

(2) Lord Howe with 25 ships signally defeated the French fleet (26 ships) under Villaret Jozeux taking six ships of the line and sinking one (the Leinster) 1 June 1794. While the two fleets were engaged in this action a large fleet of merchantmen on the coast of which the French nation depended for its means of prosecuting the war got safe into Brest harbour where they had occasion to the enemy to claim the laurels of the day notwithstanding their loss in ships and in killed and wounded which was very great. The day was as learned in England the glorious first of June

USURY from a stranger was permitted to the Jews, but forbidden from their brethren, 1491 B.C. (Exodus xxii 25, Deut xxiii 19). This law was enforced by Nebuchadnezzar, 445 B.C. (Neh vi). Usury was prohibited by the English parliament, 1341. Until the 15th century no Christians were allowed to receive interest of money, and Jews were the only usurers, and therefore often banished and persecuted, see Jews. By the 37th of Henry VIII the rate of interest was fixed at 10 per cent, 1545. This statute was repealed by Edward VI., but re-enacted 13 Eliz 1570. For later legislation, see Interest

UTAH, a western territory of North America, was organised 9 Sept 1850, the capital, Salt Lake City, became the chief seat of the Mormons (which see). Population in 1880 143,963, 1890, 207,905. Salt Lake city, 1890, 44,843

UTICA (N. Africa), an ancient Tyrian colony, an ally of Carthage, named in the treaty with the Romans 348 B.C. Here Cato the younger, after the defeat of the partisans of Pompey at Thapsus, committed suicide, 46 B.C. Utica flourished greatly after the fall of Carthage and was made a Roman city by Augustus on account of its favouring Julius Caesar. It suffered by the invasion of the Vandals, 439, and of the Saracens, about 700

* Various French historians on the authority of the French denagogue Barrère, state that the English had 36 ships of the line and the French only 26 and that the crew of the Vengeur sang the Marseillaise while the ship sank, displaying the tricolor flag. All this was denied in 1860 and disproved by rear admiral Griffith in Nov 1858. The Vengeur was ordered to the British, who started themselves to save the crew. The French statement was accepted by Alison, and at first by Carlyle, but afterwards contradicted by both

UTILITARIANISM, termed the "greatest happiness principle," the philosophy which proposes the attainment of the greatest happiness of the greatest number; a doctrine ascribed to Francis by Bentham. The doctrine is found in the writings of Locke, Hartley, Hume, and Paley; but was chiefly propounded by Jeremy Bentham in his "Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation," 1789-89, by John Stuart Mill, who died 9 May, 1873, and by Sir Edwin Chadwick, who died 5 July, 1890. Mill founded a small "utilitarian society," in 1822. He took the name from an expression in Galt's "Annals of the Parish."

UTOPIA, the name given by Sir Thomas More to an imaginary isle, representing the "best state of a public weale," described in a book written in Latin, published 1548. The work is considered to be an ironical satire on the state of Europe at the time, Utopia signifying "Nowhere." An English translation was published in 1551. For the loss of the Utopia, emigrant steamer, see Wrecks, 17 March, 1891.

UTRAQUISTS, see Calistines.

UTRECHT (the Roman Trajectum ad Rhenum) became the seat of an independent bishopric about 695. The last prelate, Henry of Bavaria, weary of his turbulent subjects, sold his temporal government to the emperor Charles V. in 1528. The union of the Seven United Provinces began here (see United Provinces); signed 23 Jan. 1579; 300th anniversary celebrated 23 Jan. 1879. The treaty of Utrecht, which terminated the wars of queen Anne, was signed by the ministers of Great Britain and France, and all the other allies, except the ministers of the empire, 11 April, 1713. This treaty secured the Protestant succession in England, the separation of the French and Spanish crowns, the destruction of the works of Dunkirk, the enlargement of the British colonies and plantations in America, and a full satisfaction for the claims of the allies. Utrecht surrendered to the Prussians, 9 May, 1787; was acquired by the French, 18 Jan. 1795, and restored at the peace, 1814. Population, 1887, 81,398; 1890, 86,116.

UXBRIDGE (W. Middlesex). On 30 Jan. 1645, commissioners met here to discuss terms of peace between Charles I. and the parliament; they separated without effect, 22 Feb. The latter required absolute control of the army and navy, the abolition of the episcopacy, liturgy, &c. Uxbridge murder, see Trials, Dec. 1884.

VACATIONS.

VACATIONS, see Terms.

VACCINATION (from Varicella Vaccina, the cow-pox), discovered by Dr. Edward Jenner. He was born in 1749, and educated for the medical profession, partially under John Hunter. Having heard that milkmaids who had had the cow-pox never took the small-pox, he, about 1780, conceived the idea of vaccination. He made the first experiment by transferring to a healthy child on 14 May, 1796, the pus from the pustule of a milkmaid who had caught the cow-pox from the cows. He announced his success in a memoir published 1798, and vaccination, begun 21 Jan. 1799, soon became general, after much opposition. For this Dr. Jenner received 10,000*l.* from parliament, 2 June, 1802, and 20,000*l.* in 1807. The first national institution for vaccination, the Royal Jennerian Institution, was founded 19 Jan. 1803. The emperor Napoleon valued Dr. Jenner so highly, that he liberated Dr. Wickham, when a prisoner of war, at Jenner's request, and subsequently whole families of English, making it a point to refuse him nothing that he asked. Vaccination, although much opposed, was practised throughout all Europe previously to 1816. Dr. Jenner died suddenly, 26 Jan. 1823.

Royal Jennerian and London Vaccine Institution, founded

The Vaccination act, 3 & 4 Vict. passed . . . 23 July, 1840

Mr. John Badoock, of Brighton, began to inoculate cows with small-pox to produce new lymph for vaccination

VACUUM, is produced by reducing the pressure of the atmosphere, whereby its power of absorbing moisture is greatly increased, this power has been utilised by M. Emil Passburg, of Breslau, in his drying apparatus which has been successfully employed for drying grains by Messrs. Guinness, of Dublin since the spring of 1888.

VALENTINE'S DAY.

VADIMONIS LACUS, the Vadimonian lake, Umbria, central Italy, near which the Etruscans were totally defeated in two severe engagements by the Roman consuls: 1, by Fabius Maximus, 309 B.C.; 2, by Cornelius Dolabella, 283.

VAGRANTS. By law, after being whipped, a vagrant was to take an oath to return to the place where he was born, or had last dwelt for three years, 1530. A vagrant a second time convicted was to lose the upper part of the grille of his right ear, 1535; a third time convicted, death. A vagabond to be branded with a V, and be a slave for two years, 1547. If he absconded and was caught, he was to be branded with S, and be a slave for life. Vagrants were punished by whipping, gaoling, boring the ears, and death for a second offence, 1572. The milder statutes were those of 17 Geo. II.; 32, 35, and 55 Geo. III. The present Vagrant Act (5 Geo. IV. c. 83) was passed in 1824. There were about 33,000 tramps in England and Wales in 1865. For vagrants in London, see under Poor.

VALDENSES, see Waldenses.

VALENCAY, a château near Châteauneuf, central France, where Napoleon I. imprisoned Ferdinand of Spain from 1808 to 1813. His kingdom was restored to Ferdinand by a treaty signed 8 Dec. 1813.

VALENCIA (E. Spain), the Valentia Edetana of the Romans, became the capital of a Moorish kingdom, 1000; annexed to Aragon 1238. Its university, founded, it is said, in the 13th century, was revived in the 15th. Valencia was taken by the earl of Peterborough in 1705, but submitted to the Bourbons after the unfortunate battle of Almansa, in 1707. It resisted the attempts made on it by marshal Mincey, but was taken from the Spaniards with a garrison of more than 16,000 men, and immense stores, by the French under Suchet, 9 Jan. 1812. Population of the city, 1887, 170,763.

VALENCIENNES (N. France). This city (the Roman Valentianae), after many changes, was taken by Louis XIV. in 1677, and annexed 1678. It was besieged from 23 May to 28 July, 1793, when the French garrison surrendered to the allies under the duke of York. It was retaken, together with Condé, by the French, 27-30 Aug. 1794; on capitulation, the garrison and 1100 emigrants were made prisoners, with immense stores.

VALENTIA, a Roman province, including the country between the walls of Severus and Adrian, was reconquered from the Picts and Scots by Theodosius, and named after Valentinian I. the reigning emperor, 368.

VALENTINE'S DAY (14 Feb.). Valentine is said to have been a bishop, who suffered martyrdom under Claudius II. at Rome; others say under Aurelian, in 271. 618,000 letters passed through the post-office on 14 Feb. 1856. 520,300 was the estimated number of valentines delivered in 1864; in 1870, 1,545,755. The origin of the ancient custom of "choosing a valentine" has been much controverted; see Feat.

VALENTINIANS, followers of Valentine, a priest, who, on being disappointed of a bishopric, broke the Christian faith, declaring there were thirty gods and goddesses, fifteen of each sex, which he called Zones, or Agas. He taught in the 2nd century, and published a gospel and psalms; his followers added other errors.

VALLADOLID (Spain), the Roman Pintia and the Moorish Belad Walid: was recovered for the Christians by Ordoño II., the first king of Leon, 914-23. It became capital of Castile in the 15th century. It was taken by the French Jan. 1808; and captured by the English, 4 June, 1813. Here died Christopher Columbus, 20 May, 1506. Population, 1887, 62,012.

VALLOMBROSA (Central Italy). A Benedictine abbey was founded here by John Gualbert, about 1038. The monks were termed Vallombrosians.

VALMY (N.E. France). Here the French, commanded by Kellermann, defeated the Prussians, commanded by the duke of Brunswick, 20 Sept. 1792. The victory was of immense moral advantage to the republicans; and Kellermann was made duke of Valmy in 1808.

VALOIS, a county (N. France) given by Philip III. to his younger son Charles, whose son Philip became king as Philip IV. in 1328; see France.

VALOR ECCLESIASTICUS, a report of the annual value of church property, made by order in 1534, was published by the Record Commission in 1810-34.

VALPARAISO, principal port of Chili, South America, was bombarded by the Spanish admiral Mendez Nuñez, on 31 March, 1866, when much property was destroyed. It suffered by earthquakes in 1822, 1829, and 1851. Population, 1885, 104,952. See Chili, 1891.

VALTELLINE (N. Italy), a district near the Rhetian Alps, seized by the Grison league, 1512, and ceded to it, 1530. At the instigation of Spain, the catholics rose and massacred the protestants, 19-21 July, 1620. After much contention between the French and Austrians, the neutrality of the Valtelline was assured in 1639. It was annexed to the Cisalpine republic in 1797; to Italy, 1807; to Austria, 1814; to Italy, 1860.

VALUATION OF PROPERTY ACT, to provide for the uniform assessment of rateable property in the metropolis, was passed 9 Aug. 1869.

VALVASOR (or "VAVASOR"). Camden holds that the "Vavisor" was next below a baron. Du Cange maintains that there were two sorts of vavasors: the greater, who held of the king, such as barons and counts; and the lesser, called "ravalasai," who held of the former, such as vassals holding land under a noblemen himself a vassal. Vavasors are mentioned in the Domesday book, 1086.

VANADIUM (from Vanadis, the Scandinavian Venus), metal discovered by Berzelius, in 1830, combined with iron ore. A similar metal, discovered in lead ore by Del Rio in 1801, and named Erythronium, was proved by Wöhler to be Vanadium. Vanadium was discovered in the copper-bearing beds in Cheshire, in 1865, by Mr. (aft. Sir) H. E. Roscoe, by whom its peculiarities were further studied, and published in 1867-8. It is useful in photography and dyeing.

VANCOUVER'S ISLAND, North Pacific ocean, near the main land. Settlements were made here by the English in 1781, which were seized by the Spaniards in 1789, but restored. By a treaty between the British government and that of the United States in 1846, this island was secured to the former. It has become of much greater importance since the discovery of gold in the neighbouring main land in 1858, and the consequent establishment of the colony of British Columbia (which see). Victoria, the capital, was founded in 1857. The island was united with British Columbia by act passed in Aug. 1866; and on 24 May, 1868, Victoria was declared the capital. Lord Dufferin, governor-general of Canada, was warmly received here, 15 Aug. 1876. See Juan, San. Chinese immigrants are virtually excluded by a poll-tax, 1878.

Vancouver nearly destroyed by fire, about 15 June; again 6 July, 1886. Wellington colliery explosion; 76 lives lost, Jan. 1888.

VANCOUVER'S VOYAGE. Captain Vancouver served as a midshipman under captain Cook, and was appointed to command during a voyage of discovery, to ascertain the existence of any navigable communication between the North Pacific and North Atlantic oceans. He sailed 7 Jan. 1791, and returned 24 Sept. 1795. He compiled an account of this voyage of survey of the north-west coast of America, and died in 1798.

VANDALS, a Germanic race, attacked the Roman empire in the 3rd century, and began to ravage Germany and Gaul, 406-14; their kingdom in Spain was founded in 411, under Genseric; they invaded and conquered the Roman territories in Africa, 429, and took Carthage, Oct. 439. They were subdued by Belisarius in 534. They were driven out by the Saracen Moors. The dukes of Mecklenburg style themselves princes of the Vandals.

VANGUARD, see Wrecks, 1875.

VARANGIANS, OR VARAGIANS, a name given to northern pirates, who invaded Flanders, about 813, France, about 840, Italy, 852. Their leader, Ruric, invited by the Novgorodians to help them, founded the Russian monarchy, 862.

VARENNES, a town in N E France, is celebrated for the arrest of Louis XVI, his queen, sister, and two children. They fled from the Tuileries on 21 June, 1791, were taken here the next day, and conducted back to Paris, mainly through Drouet, the postmaster, who, at an intermediate town, recognised the king.

VARNA, a fortified seaport in Bulgaria, formerly European Turkey. A great battle was fought near this place, 10 Nov 1444, between the Turks under Amurath II and the Hungarians under their king Ladislaus and John Hunniades. The latter were defeated with great slaughter, the king was killed and Hunniades made prisoner, who had opposed the Christians breaking the truce for ten years, recently made at Szegedin. The emperor Nicholas of Russia arrived before Varna, the head quarters of his army, then he began the place 5 Aug 1828. The Turkish garrison made a vigorous attack on the besiegers, 7 Aug., and another on the 21st, but were repulsed. Varna surrendered, after a sanguinary conflict, to the Russian army, 11 Oct 1828. It was restored at the peace in 1829, its fortifications were dismantled but have since been restored. The allied armies disembarked at Varna, 29 May, 1854, and sailed for the Crimea 3 Sept. They suffered severely from cholera. In conformity with the treaty of Berlin Varna was evacuated by the Turks and occupied by Russians, autumn, 1878. Population, 1889, 23,256.

VASSALAGE, see Fief and Lave, and Slavery.

VASSAR COLLEGE (on the east bank of the Hudson, United States), for the higher education of women, was founded by Matthew Vassar in 1861.

VASSY (N E France). The massacre of the protestants at this place by the duke of Guise on 1 March, 1562, led to desolating civil wars.

VATICAN (Rome), the ancient Mons Vaticanus, a hill of Rome. The commencement of the palace is ascribed to Constantine, Liberius, and Symmachus, and also to pope Eugenius III 1146. It became the residence of the pope at his return from Avignon, 1377. The palace is said to contain 7000 rooms, rich in works of art, ancient and modern. The library, founded by pope Nicholas V, 1448, is exceedingly rich in printed books and MSS.—Pietro's description of the Vatican, with numerous plates, was published 1829-38.—The phrase "the funds of the Vatican" was first used by Voltaire, 1748.—The ancient Vatican Codex of the Old and New Testament in Greek was published at Rome in 1857. For "Vatican Decrees, see Concilia Sacra Observatoria.

VAUD, a Swiss canton, after having been successfully held by the Franks, the kings of Burgundy, emperors of Germany, dukes of Burgundy and dukes of Savoy, was conquered by the Bernese, Jan 1536, and annexed, 1554. It was made independent in 1798, joined the confederation in 1815. A new constitution was obtained in 1830, after agitation.

Vauxhall Bridge, constructed of iron under the direction of Mr Walker at an expense of 150,000*l*. (to be defrayed by a toll). The first stone was laid 9 May 1811, by prince Charles, eldest son of the duke of Brunswick, and the bridge was opened on 4 June, 1816, freed from toll, 24 May, 1879.

Vauxhall Gardens (London), were so denominated from the manor of Vauxhall, Falkenhall, Fox-hall, or Fankeshall, said to have been the property of Fulke de Breauté about 1282. The premises were the property of Jane Vaux in 1615, and the mansion-house was then called Stockmans. From her it passed through various hands, till it became the property of Mr Tyers in 1732. The New Spring Gardens at Vauxhall are mentioned by John Evelyn in his diary 2 July, 1661, Pops 20 May, 1662, Wycherley 1672 and in the Spectator 1711 as a place of great resort. The gardens were opened for a "riddio al fresco" 7 June, 1732, by Jonathan Tyers. The greatest season was in 1823, when 133,279 persons visited the gardens, and the receipts were 29,500*l*. The number on the then supposed last night, 5 Sept 1839, was 1089 persons. Vauxhall was sold by auction 9 Sept 1841, for 20,200*l*, and again 20 Aug 1849. The last performance at Vauxhall took place on 25 July, 1859. The ground has been sold for building purposes. Six persons killed and many injured by fall of stack of wood at Luckley's saw-mill, 25 Feb 1860.

VEHMIC TRIBUNALS Fehmgerichte, Fehmgerichte or Fehmgerichte, a secret tribunal established in Westphalia to maintain religion and the public peace, held their origin in the time of Charlemagne and rose to importance in 1182, when Westphalia became subject to the archbishop of Cologne. Persons of the most exalted rank were subjected to their decisions, being frequently seized, tried, and executed. The emperors endeavoured to suppress them, but did not succeed till the 16th century. Their last court, it is said, was held in 1563. Sir W Scott has described them in "Anne of Geierstein." A remnant of these tribunals was abolished by Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, in 1811.

VEII, an independent Etruscan city near Rome. There were frequent wars between Veii and Rome, for above three centuries, see Fabii. Veii was taken by the dictator Camillus, it is said, after a siege of ten years, 396 B C. When Rome was destroyed by the Gauls in 390, the Romans, who had led to Veli, desired to remain there, and make it their capital, but were discomfited from it by the exertions of Camillus, and Veli was abandoned. It was restored by the Emperor Augustus, but had fallen into decay, at the time of Hadrian.

VELLORE (S.E. India) became the residence of the family of the deposed sultan of Mysore, and was strongly garrisoned by English troops, 1799. The revolt of the sepoys, in which the family of the late Tippecook took an active part, took place 10 July, 1866. The insurgents were subdued by colonel Gillespie, and mostly put to the sword; about 800 sepoys were killed.

VELOCEPÉDES. A machine of this kind was invented by Blanchard the aeronaut, and described in the Journal de Paris, 27 July, 1779; and one was invented by Nicéphore Niepce in 1818. The "dandy-horse" or "Draisena," a machine called a velocipede, was patented for the Baron von Drais, in Paris and London in 1818, and described in Ackermann's Repository, Feb. 1819. These machines came again into use in 1861; and since 1867 have been very common under various forms, termed bicycles and tricycles; the chief inventor of which, James Starley, an ingenious mechanic of Albourne, Sussex, was buried at Coventry, June, 1881. The popular "Otto" bicycle, first patented in 1881, much improved since. Velocipede races took place at the Crystal Palace, 26 May, 1869, and frequently since. Mr. John Mayall and two friends travelled to Brighton on velocipedes, 17 Feb. 1869.

VENNER'S INSURRECTION, see Insurrections, 1667.

VENTILATORS were invented by the rev. Dr. Hales, and described to the Royal Society of London, May, 1741; and the ventilator for the use of ships was announced by Mr. Triewald, in November, same year. The marquis of Chabannes' plan for warming and ventilating theatres and houses for audiences was applied to those of London about 1819. The systems of Dr. Reid (about 1834) and others followed, with much controversy. Dr. Arnott's work on this subject was published in 1838. A commission on warming and ventilation issued a report in 1859.

New air machine in the house of commons started 5 June, 1874
Mr. Tobin's plan, a horizontal tube from without communicating with vertical tubes inside, successful at Leeds, described (in Times) 20 April, 1875
Mr. D. G. Huey's system was exhibited at Messrs. Barclay's bank, Lombard-street, London, and reported successful Jan. 1892

VENTRILOQUISM (speaking from the belly), is evidently described in Isaiah xxix. 4 (about 712 B.C.). Among eminent ventriloquists were baron Mengen and M. Saint Gille, about 1772 (whose experiments were examined by a commission of the French Academy); Thomas King (about 1716); Charles Mathews (1824); and M. Alexandre (1822).

VENUS, the Roman goddess of love and beauty (the Greek Aphrodite). The transit of the planet Venus over the sun was predicted by Kepler, but not observed. The first transit observed, was by the rev. Jeremiah Horrox, or Horrocks, and his friend, Wm. Crabtree, on 24 Nov. 1639, as predicted by Horrox in 1633. The astronomer-royal Maskelyne observed her transit at St. Helena, 6 June, 1761. Capt. Cook made his first voyage in the Endeavour, to Otaheite, to observe a transit of Venus, 3 June, 1769; see Cook's Voyages. The diurnal rotation of Venus was discovered by Cassini in 1667. See Sun, note. Statues: Venus de Medici, found near Tivoli and removed to France, 1680; the Venus found at Milo or Melos, 1820, placed in the Louvre, Paris, 1834.

Halley suggested the observation of the transit as a means of estimating the distance of the earth from the sun, and devised a method for this purpose.

Another method was invented by Delisle about 1716
Both plans were used in Dec. 1743
Expeditions for the accurate observation of the phenomena, on 8 Dec. astronomical day; ordinary day, 9 Dec. 1744, were sent to different parts of the globe by all the great powers, and favourable results have been reported 1875-6

The transit, on 6 Dec. 1882, was observed at Bath, Penzance, Cork, Cape Town, Washington, Melbourne, and many other places. The next transits will take place 8 June, 2004, and 6 June, 2012.

VERA CRUZ (Mexico), built about 1600; was taken by the Americans in 1847, and by the allies on 17 Dec. 1861, during the intervention; retaken by the liberals, under Juarez, 27 June, 1867.

VERCELLI, the ancient Verocella, Piedmont, near which Marius defeated the Cimbri, 101 B.C. It was the seat of a republic in the 13th and 14th centuries. It was taken by the Spaniards, 1630; French, 1704; and allies, 1706; and afterwards partook of the fortunes of Piedmont.

VERDEN (Hanover). Here Charlemagne massacred about 4500 Saxons, who had rebelled and relapsed into idolatry, 782.

VERDUN (the ancient Verodunum), a first-class fortress on the Meuse, N.E. France, made a magazine for his legions by Julius Cæsar. It was acquired by the Franks in the sixth century, and formed part of the dominions of Lothaire by the treaty of Verdun, 843, when the empire was divided between the sons of Louis I. It was taken and annexed to the empire by Otto I. about 939. It surrendered to France in 1552; and was formally ceded in 1648. It was taken and held by the Prussians 43 days, Sept.—Oct. 1792. Gen. Beaupaire, the commandant, committed suicide before the surrender, and 14 ladies were executed on 28 May, 1794, for going to the king of Prussia to solicit his clemency for the town. Verdun surrendered to the Germans 8 Nov. 1870, after a brave defence; two vigorous sallies being made 28 Oct. Above 4000 men were captured, with a large number of arms and ammunition. It was the last place held by the Germans; and was given up 15, 16 Sept. 1873, and the troops retired.

VERGARA, N. SPAIN. Here the Carlist general, Maroto, made a treaty, termed "The pacification of Vergara," with Espartero, 31 Aug. 1839. The monument to celebrate it was destroyed by the Carlists in Aug. 1873.

VERMANDOIS (N. France), a county given by Charlemagne to his second son Pepin, whose family held it till the 11th century; in 1156 it came, by marriage, to the counts of Flanders; and in 1185 it was seized by Philip II., and incorporated with the monarchy in 1215.

VERMONT, a northern state in North America, was settled by the French, 1724-31; and ceded to Great Britain in 1763. It was freed from the authority of New York, and admitted as a state of the union in 1791. Population 1880, 332,286; 1890, 332,422; capital, Montpelier.

VERNEUIL (N.W. France), the site of a battle fought 17 Aug. 1424, between the Burgundians and English under the regent duke of Bedford, and the French, assisted by the Scots, commanded by the count de Narbonne, the earls of Douglas and Buchan, &c. The French at first were successful; but some Lombard auxiliaries, who had taken the English camp, commenced pillaging. Two thousand English archers came then fresh to the attack; and the French and Scots were totally defeated, and their leaders killed.

VERNON GALLERY. The inadequate manner in which modern British art was represented in the National Gallery was somewhat remedied in 1847 by the munificent present to the nation, by Mr. Robert Vernon, of a collection of 157 pictures, all but two being by first-rate British artists. They were first exhibited at Mr. Vernon's house in Pall-mall, next in the vaults beneath the National Gallery, afterwards at Marlborough House, and are now at the South Kensington Museum. In 1857, Mr. John Sheepshanks followed Mr. Vernon's example; see Sheepshanks' Donations.

VERONA (N. Italy) was founded by the Gauls or Etruscans; see Campus Raudius. The amphitheatre was built by Titus, A.D. 82. Verona has been the site of many conflicts. It was taken by Constantine 312; and on 27 Sept. 429 Theodoric defeated Odoacer, king of Italy. Verona was taken by Charlemagne 774. About 1260 Martino della Scala was elected podestà, and his descendants (the Scaligeri) ruled, till subdued by the Visconti, dukes of Milan, 1387. Verona was conquered by the Venetians 1405, and held by them with some intermissions till its capture by the French general Massena, 3 June, 1796. Near to it Charles Albert of Sardinia defeated the Austrians 6 May, 1848. Verona is one of the four strong Austrian fortresses termed the Quadrangle, or Quadrilateral (which see), and here the emperor Francis Joseph, on 12 July, 1859, in an order of the day, announced to his army that he must yield to circumstances unfavourable to his policy, and thanked his people and army for their support. It was surrendered to the Italian government, 16 Oct. 1866; and the king was received by 70,000 persons in the amphitheatre, 18 Nov. 1866. Above 50,000 coins of Gallienus and other emperors, chiefly bronze, discovered near Verona, Jan. 1877. Population, 1881, 60,768.

VERSAILLES (near Paris) was a small village, in a forest thirty miles in circuit; where Louis XIII. built a hunting-seat about 1632. Louis XIV. between 1661 and 1687 enlarged it into a magnificent palace, which became the usual residence of the kings of France. By the treaty between Great Britain and the revolted colonies of British North America, signed at Paris, the latter power was admitted to be a sovereign and independent state, 3 Sept. 1783. On the same day a treaty was signed at Versailles between Great Britain, France, and Spain, by which Pondicherry and Carikal, with other possessions in Bengal, were restored to France, and Trincomalee restored to the Dutch. Here was held the military festival of the royal guards 1 Oct. 1789, which was followed (on the 5th and 6th) by the attack of the mob, who massacred the guards and brought the king back to Paris. Versailles became the residence of Louis-Philippe in 1830. The historical gallery was opened in 1837. Versailles, with the troops there, surrendered to the Germans 19 Sept. 1870, and the crown prince of Prussia entered the next day; and on 26 Sept. he awarded the iron cross to above 30 soldiers at the foot of the statue of Louis XIV. The palace was converted into an hospitál. The royal head-quarters were removed here from Ferrières 5 Oct. After the peace, Versailles became the seat of the French government (see France) March, 1871. Removed to Paris 27 Nov. 1879. The congress for the revision of the constitution met here 4—13 Aug. 1884. See France, 1889.

VERSE, see Poetry, Hexameter, Elegy, Iambic, &c. Surrey's translation of part of Virgil's Æneid into blank verse is the first English composition of the kind, omitting tragedy, extant in the English language (published in 1547). The verse previously used in our grave compositions was the stanza of eight lines, the ottava rima (as adopted with the addition of one line by Spenser in his Fairy Queen), who probably borrowed it from Ariosto and Tasso. Boccaccio introduced it into Italy in his Tessida, having copied it from the old French chansons. Trissino is said to have been the first introducer of blank verse among the moderns, about 1508. Vossius.

VERULAM, see Alban's, St.

VERVINS (N. France). Here was concluded the peace between Philip II. of Spain and Henry IV. of France, with mutual concessions, 2 May, 1598.

VEREORANCE (S.E. France), near Vienne. Here Gundemar, king of the Burgundians, defeated and killed Clodomir, king of Orleans, and revenged the murder of his brother Sigismund and his family, 524. This conflict is called also the battle of Veiron.

VESPERS, see Sicilian Vespers. In the house of the French ambassador at Blackfriars, in London, a Jesuit was preaching to upwards of three hundred persons in an upper room, the floor of which gave way with the weight, when the whole congregation was precipitated to the street, and the preacher and more than a hundred of his auditory, chiefly persons of rank, were killed. This catastrophe, termed the Fatal Vespers, occurred 26 Oct. 1623. Stow.

VESTA. The planet Vesta (the ninth) was discovered by Dr. Olbers, of Bremen, on 29 March, 1807. She appears like a star of the sixth magnitude.

VESTALS, virgin priestesses, took care of the perpetual fire consecrated to Vesta. The mother of Romulus was a vestal. Numa is said to have appointed four, 710 B.C., and Tarquin added two. Minerva was buried alive for breaking her virgin vow, 337 B.C.; Sextilia, 273 B.C.; and Cornelia Maximilian, A.D. 92. It is said that only eighteen vestals had been condemned since the time of Numa. The order was abolished by Theodosius, 389.

"VESTIGES OF THE NATURAL HISTORY OF CREATION," a work which upholds the doctrine of progressive development as a hypothesis history of organic creation, ascribed to Robert Chambers, and other persons, first appeared in 1844, and occasioned much controversy. See Origin of Species.

VESUVIUS, MOUNT, S. Italy. Near it, the Latin confederacy were totally defeated by the Romans, whose general, P. Decimus Mus, had devoted himself to death, 340 B.C. By an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum (which see) were overwhelmed 24 Aug. 79 A.D., and more than 200,000 persons perished, among them Pliny the naturalist. Numerous other disastrous eruptions have occurred. Torre del Greco, with 4000 persons, was destroyed, 17 Dec. 1631. There was a dreadful eruption took place suddenly, 24 Nov. 1759, and another 8 Aug. 1767. The violent burst in 1767 was the 34th from the time of Titus. One in June, 1794, was most destructive: the lava flowed over 5000 acres of rich vineyards and cultivated land, and Torre del Greco was a second time burned; the top of the mountain fell in, and the crater is now nearly two miles in circumference. A great eruption in Oct. 1822, and others in May, 1855, May and June, 1858, caused great destruction. A series of violent eruptions causing much damage occurred in Dec. 1861, and in Feb. 1865. Torre del Greco was again destroyed in Dec. 1861. Another eruption began 12 Nov. 1867, and continued increasing in grandeur and danger, March, 1868. The phenomena were observed by professors Tyndall and Miller, sir John Lubbock, and other scientific men, in April, 1868. A great eruption began 8 Oct. 1868, and continued, causing much destruction, 19, 20 Nov. A severe eruption began 23 April and ended about 3 May, 1872; above 60 lives were lost. The mountain was disturbed in 1876; and another eruption began about 20 Sept. 1878; lava was spouted to the height of 300 feet; an eruption began 11 June, 1879; an intermittent eruption 2 May, 1885. A new crater formed 8 June; continued flowing of lava, 11 June; ceases 16 June, renewed; a Brazilian tourist fell into the erupted, July, 1864. "Increasing eruptions, 9 June of 1864; active, 13 Sept. 1864. Professor John Phillips' "Vesuvius" was published 1869.

VETERINARY COLLEGES. The Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, at Red Lion Square London, which alone grants diplomas, was chartered in 1844. The Veterinary Surgeons act, 44 & 45 Vict. ccs. 62; passed 27 Aug. 1881, deals only with this college. The Royal Veterinary College at Camden Town, London, N.W., was founded in 1791. Centenary festival, the duke of Cambridge in the chair, the prince of Wales present, 19 Oct.
1891. These are veterinary colleges in Edinburgh and Glasgow.

•VICE, an instrument of which Archytas of Tarentum's disciple of Pythagoras, is said to have been the inventor, along with the pulley and other implements, 420 B.C. *Society for the Suppression

VIGENZA (the ancient Vicenza, N. Italy) was the seat of a republic in the 12th century. It greatly suffered by the ravages of Alaric, 401, and Attila, 452. Having joined the Lombard league, it was asked by Frederic II. 1236. After many changes it was subjected to Venice, and with it fell under the French domination, 1796; and was given to Austria in 1814. Having revolted, it was retaken by Radetzky, 11 June, 1848. It was annexed to the Kingdom of Italy, Oct. 1866.

Colonel Collins lands with a party of convicts with the intention of founding a settlement at Port Phillip, but afterwards removed to Van Diemen's Land.

Messrs. Hume and Howell, two stock-owners from New South Wales, explore part of the country, but do not discover its great advantages.

Mr. Edward Henty (of a Sussex family), comes from Tasmania with cattle, sheep, shepherds, &c., and settles in Portland Bay; his brothers, Stephen George and John, follow soon.

Mr. John Batman enters between the heads of Port Phillip, and purchases a large tract of land from the aborigines for a few gawags and blankets: he shortly after, with fifteen associates from Hobarton, took possession of 600,000 acres in the present Geelong country.

The Lancaster associates and Mr. John Pascoe Futkner ascend the Yarra-Yarra (or over-riding) river, and encamp on the site of Melbourne.

The colonists (450 in number) possess 120,000 sheep, 2500 cattle, and 150 horses; Sir R. Bourke, governor of New South Wales, visits the colony, determines the sites of towns, and causes the land to be surveyed and resold, settling aside many contending claims; he appoints captain Lonsdale chief-magistrate (see Melbourne).

The colony named Victoria.

VICTORIA PARK (E. London), was originated by an act passed in 1841, which enabled her majesty's commissioners of woods and forests to purchase certain lands for a royal park, with the sum of 72,000*l*. raised by the same act, by the sale of York-houses to the duke of Sutherland. The act described the land to be so purchased, containing 290 acres, situate in the parishes of St. John, Hackney, St. Matthew, Bethnal Green and St. Mary, Stratford-le-bow. The park was completed and opened to the public in 1845. Lady (then Miss) Burdett-Coutts presented a handsome drinking fountain and was present at its inauguration 28 June, 1867. The park was visited by the queen, 2 April, 1873, and in memory of her reception, she presented a clock and peal of bells to St. Mark's church recognition service, 21 May, 1874. See Parks.

VICTORIA RAILWAY BRIDGE (tubular), over the St. Lawrence, Montreal, erected by Mr. James Hodgson, under the superintendence of Mr. Robert Stephenson and Mr. A. M. Ross engineers, was begun 24 May, 1854, and finally opened by the prince of Wales, 25 Aug. 1860. It forms part of the Grand Trunk railway, which connects Canada and the seaboard states of North America. The length is about sixty yards less than two English miles and about 7*1*/₂ times longer than Waterloo bridge, and ten times longer than new Chelsea bridge, the height sixty feet between the summer level of the river and the under surface of the central tube. It is supported by 24 piers. The cost was 1,700,000*l*. On 5 Jan. 1855 while constructing the bridge was much injured by floating ice, but the stonework remained firm.

VIENNE, the ancient Vienna Allobrogum (S E France) Here the emperor Valentinian II was put to death by Arbogastes, 15 May, 392, and a short reaction in favour of paganism followed.

Vienna was capital of the kingdom of Burgundy in 432 and 879, and sometimes gave its name to the kingdom. A general council was held here in 1311. Vienna was annexed to the French monarchy, 1448.

VIGILANCE ASSOCIATION, see under National.

VIGILANCE MURDER ASSOCIATION, see Ireland, 1883.

VIGO (N. W. Spain) was attacked and burned by the English, under Drake and Norris in 1589. Sir George Rooke, with the combined English and Dutch fleets, attacked the French fleet and the Spanish galleons in the port of Vigo, when several men-of-war and galleons were taken, and many destroyed, and abundance of plate and other valuable effects fell into the hands of the conquerors, 12 Oct. 1702. Vigo was taken by lord Cobham in 1719, but relinquished after raising contributions. It was again taken by the British, 27 March, 1809.

VIKINGS. Scandinavian chiefs, Swedes, Danes, and Norsemen, who in the 4th century migrated—eastward, to the countries beyond the Baltic; westward and southward, chiefly to the British isles.

Mr. Paul B. Du Chaillu, in his "Viking Age," describes the Vikings as the ancestors of "the English-speaking Nations" Oct. 1889.

VILLA FRANCA. Near here, and Llerena, Spain, the British cavalry, under sir Stapleton Cotton, defeated the French cavalry under marshal Soult, 11 April, 1812.—VILLA FRANCA, a small port on the Mediterranean, near Genoa, was bought for a steam-packet station by a Russian company, about Aug. 1863, which caused some political excitement.—At VILLA FRANCA, in Lombardy, the emperors of France and Austria met, on 11 July, 1859 (after the battle of Solferino), and on 12 July signed the preliminaries of peace, the basis of the treaty of Zurich (which see).

VILLA VICIOSA. 1. in Portugal. Here the Portuguese, under the French general Schomberg, defeated the Spaniards, 1665. 2. in Castile, Spain. Here the struggle for the Spanish crown was decided in favour of Philip V. by Vendôme's victory over Staremberg and the Austrians, 10 Dec. 1710.

VILLAIN, or VILLEN, see Slavery in England.

VILLE DE HAVRE, French Atlantic mail steamer, 5,100 tons, sailed from New York for Havre, 15 Nov. 1873; was run into by a Glasgow clipper, Lochearn, about 2 a.m., 22 Nov., and sank in twelve minutes; 226 out of 313 persons perished.

The crew of the Lochearn rescued 87, who were conveyed to Cardiff by the American vessel Tri-Mountain, capt. Urquhart, arriving there 4 Dec. 1873. The Lochearn, beginning to sink, 28 Nov. was abandoned by her crew, who were rescued by the British Queen, and brought to Plymouth 7 Dec. On judicial examination, the Lochearn was exonerated in England, but censured in France Jan. 1874.

VILLETIA (Paraguay, South America). Here Lopez and the Paraguayans were totally defeated by the Brazilians and their allies, 11 Dec. 1868. Lopez and 200 men fled; 3000 prisoners were made; and the war was considered to be ended.

VIMIEIRA (in Portugal), where the British and Spanish forces, under sir Arthur Wellesley, defeated the French, under marshal Junot, duke of Abrantes, 21 Aug. 1808. The attack, made with great bravery, was gallantly repulsed; it was repeated by Kellermann at the head of the French reserve, which was also repulsed. The French, charged with the bayonet, withdrew on all points in confusion, leaving many prisoners.

VINCENNES, a strong castle near Paris; a residence of the French kings from the 12th to the 14th centuries. Henry V. of England died at the Bois de Vincennes, 31 Aug. 1422. At the fosse of the castle, Louis duc d'Enghien was shot by order of Napoleon, after a hasty trial, early on the morning of 22 March, 1804.

VINCENT, CAPE ST. (S. W. Portugal). See Cape St. Vincent, and Rodney's Victories.

VINCENT, ST. (West Indies), long a neutral island; but at the peace of 1763, the French agreed that the right to it should be vested in the English. The latter soon after engaged in a war against the Caribs, on the windward side of the island, who were obliged to consent to a peace, by which they ceded a large tract of land to the British crown. In 1779 the Caribs greatly contributed to the reduction of this island by the French, who, however, restored it in 1783. In 1795 the French landed some troops, and again intrigued the Caribs to an insurrection, which was not subdued for several months. The great eruption of the Soufriere mountain, after the lapse of nearly a century, occurred in 1812. Population in 1861, 31,753; in 1881, 40,548; in 1891, 41,054; see Windward Isles.

Great destruction of life and property by a hurricane 16 Aug. 1886.

VINCENT DE PAUL, ST. CHARITABLE SOCIETY, founded in 1833, in France, by twelve young men. It extends its extremely beneficial operations into Britain. Its power excited the jealousy of the French government, which suppressed its central committee of Paris, in Oct. 1861. St. Vincent de Paul was born, 1576; established the congregation of Lazarists, or Vincentines, 1625; Sisters of Charity, 1634; a foundling hospital, 1648. He died 1660.

VINCY, N. France. Here Charles Martel defeated the Neustrians, 21 May, 717, and acquired their country.

VINE. The vine was planted by Noah, 2347 B.C. Gen. ix. 20. A colony of vine-dressers from Phoenicia, in Ionia, settled at Marseilles, and instructed the South Gauls in tillage, vine-dressing, and commerce, about 600 B.C. Some think that vines are aborigines of Languedoc, Provence, and Sicily, and that they grow spontaneously on the Mediterranean shores of Italy, France, and Spain. The vine was carried into Champagne, and part of Germany, by the emperor Probus, about A.D. 279. The vine and sugar-cane were planted in Madeira in 1420. In the gardens of Hampton-court palace is an old and celebrated vine, said to surpass any known vine in Europe; see Grapes, and Wine. The Tokay vines were planted in 1350.

VINE DISEASE. In the spring of 1845, Mr. E. Tucker, of Margate, observed a fungus (since named Oidium Tuckeri) on grapes in the hot-houses of Mr. Slater, of Margate. It is a whitish mildew, and totally destroys the fruit.

The spores of this oidium were found in the vintages at Versailles in 1847. The disease soon reached the trellised vines, and in 1850 many lost all their produce. In 1859, it spread over France, Italy, Spain, Syria, and in Sicily and Capriensis attacked the vineyards, reducing the crop to one-twelfth of the usual amount. Through its ravages, the wine manufacture in Madeira ceased for several years.

Many attempts have been made to arrest the progress of this disease, but without much effect. Sulphur dust is the most efficacious remedy.

The disease had much abated in France, Portugal and Madeira, in 1869. In 1868 Californian vines were introduced into the two latter.

He expounded his system to the Society of Arts, London, 14 March, 1866, and published a book in 1867.

VISIGOTHS separated from the Ostrogoths about 330 see Goths. The emperor Valens, about 369 admitted them into the Roman territories upon the condition of their serving when wanted in the Roman armies, and Theodosius the Great permitted them to form distinct corps commanded by their own officers. In 400, under Alari, they invaded Italy, and in 410 took Rome. They founded their kingdom of Toulouse, 414, conquered the Alani, and extended their rule into Spain, 414, expelled the Romans in 458, and finally were themselves conquered by the Saracens under Musa, in 711, when their last king, Rodaia, was defeated and slain, see Spain for a list of the Visigothic kings. Their rule in France ended with their defeat by Clovis at Vouillé, in 507.

VITAL FORCE, defined by Humboldt "as an unknown cause preventing the elements from obeying their primitive affinities." This theory is now opposed by many physiologists, and animal motion is attributed to muscular and nervous irritability, illustrated by the researches of Galvani, Humboldt, Sir Charles Bell, Marshall Hall, and others. The subject has been much discussed recently by Huxley and other eminent physiologists.

VITI ISLES, see Ips

VITTORIA (N Spain), the site of a victory obtained by Wellington over the French army commanded by Joseph Bonaparte, king of Spain, and Marshal Jourdan, 21 June, 1813. The hostile armies were nearly equal, from 70,000 to 75,000 each. After a long and fearful battle, the French were driven, towards evening, through the town of Vittoria and in their retreat were thrown into irretrievable confusion. The British loss was 22 officers and 479 men killed, 167 officers and 2640 men wounded. Marshal Jourdan lost 151 pieces of cannon, 451 waggons of ammunition, all his baggage, provisions, cattle and treasure, with his baton as a marshal of France. Continuing the pursuit on the 25th, Wellington took Jourdan's only remaining gun. Population, 1887, 27,660.

VIVISECTION. Physiological experiments upon living animals, having much increased the societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals in Dresden and Paris in 1859 requested the opinion of a committee of eminent scientific men on the merits of the knowledge thus acquired. Their judgment was not unanimous. The London society took up the question in 1860, and printed a pamphlet by Mr G. MacLellan against vivisection. In Aug. 1862 an international conference to discuss the question was held at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The subject was discussed in 1866, and a prize awarded by the London society. Sir Charles Bell's opinion of vivisection was, that it either obscured the subject it was meant to illustrate, or misled men into practical errors of the most serious character. Opposition to vivisection continued, 1892.

Discussion revived in consequence of the proposition of Dr. Schott in France. Who justified vivisection when chloroform or any other anæsthetic is used. 1873 6

Rival societies. 1. Society for the abolition of vivisection. 1875. 2. International Association for total suppression of vivisection. 1876 Commission (Viscount Cardwell, Professor Huxley, and others) to inquire into the practice, appointed 23 June 1875. Report signed 8 Jan. 1876. Published March 1876. A bill to regulate vivisection (cruelty to animals &c.) brought into parliament (strongly opposed by the medical profession in general, June, July passed 25 Aug. 1876. Vivisectioners are to have a licence or certificate.

Resolution in favour of vivisection passed by the International Medical Congress, London, 9 Aug. 1882. The prosecution of Prof. Ferriar (who had experimented on the brains of monkeys under anæsthetics) and others failed. Nov. Dr Koch of Berlin, demonstrates that tubercular disease can be propagated by organisms termed bacilli.

experiments. Ireland, 8 licences. 34 experiments; anæsthetics employed when required. 442 experiments in Great Britain in 1884. Report for 1886 and 1887. Great Britain 64 licences. In 1888 55 licences and 1063 experiments. Instructed by Dr Ferriar vivisection experiments, Dr Hughes Bennett killed in a mouse a brain a tumour, which was removed by Mr Godlee 25 Nov. 1884.

VIZIANAGRAM, a town in Madras presidency, formerly a kingdom, among the last bulwarks against the Mahomedan invasion, and a refuge for Hindoo learning. The sovereigns date from the 14th century. See Vedas.

VIZIER, GRAND, an officer of the Ottoman Porte, said to have been first appointed by Amurath I. about 1386. The office was abolished in 1838, but since been frequently revived and suppressed, see Turkey.

VLADIMIR (central Russia), a city founded in the 12th century, and the capital of a grand duchy from 1157 to about 1328.

VOCALION, a new musical instrument in which tones are produced from strings made to vibrate by currents of air the joint invention of Mr James Bailie Hamilton and Mr John Farmer assisted by Mr Hermann Smith, described and illustrated by Mr Hamilton at the Royal Institution, 21 May, 1875, and tried successfully at Harrow, 27 March, 1882, and soon after at Westminster Abbey, and at other places.

VOIRON, see Vesuvius

VOLAPUK (from 'world and 'speak'), universal commercial language invented by M. Schleyer, who taught it in Paris in Feb. 1886. The Philological Society of London advocated its use in diplomacy and science, in 1887. The roots chiefly borrowed from Romance, Germanic and especially English languages shortened. There is a Volapuk Academy at Munich, and about 500,000 people are using or learning it.

Mr C. E. Sprague's handbook of Volapuk published Jan. 1888. Volapuk reports successful and spreading in Germany and America.

Mr P. Homm publishes his Anglo-Franco in opposition to Volapuk. March 1889.

VOLCANOES. In different parts of the earth there are above 200 volcanoes which have been active in modern times. see China, Java, Sumatra, New Zealand, Ochylus, and Iceland. In Mexico a plain was filled up into a mountain more than a thousand feet in height by the burning lava from a volcano, in 1759. A volcano in the vale of Ebro broke out 13 Sept. 1777, which threw out an immense quantity of red water, that discoloured the sea for several leagues. A new volcano appeared in one of the Azore islands 1 May, 1808.

VOLHYNIA, a Polish province, annexed to Russia 1793.

VOLSCI an ancient Latin people, frequently at war with the Romans. From their capital, Corioli, Caius Martius (who defeated them about 490 B.C.) derived his name Coriolanus. The story of his banishment by his ungrateful countrymen, of his revenge on them by bringing the Volsci to the gates of Rome, yet afterwards sparing the city at the entreaties of his mother, Volturna (487 B.C.), is considered by many as a poetical legend. The Volsci and their allies were totally defeated at Sutrumby the consul Valerius Corvus (346), and incorporated with the Roman people about 336.

VOLSINI, the inhabitants of an Etrurian city, who, after a sharp contest, were completely overcome by the Roman consul Titus Coruncanius, 280 B.C.

VOLTAIC PILE or BATTERY, was constructed by Galvani, see Galvanism in article Electricity. The principle was discovered by Alessandro Volta, of Como (born 1745), for thirty years professor of natural philosophy at Pavia, and announced by him to the Royal Society of London in 1793. The battery was first set up in 1800. Volta was made an Italian count and senator by Napoleon Bonaparte, and was otherwise greatly honoured. While young he invented the electrophorus, electric pistol, and hydrogen lamp. He died in 1826, aged 81. The form of the Voltaic battery has been greatly improved by the researches of modern philosophers. The nitric acid battery of sir W. E. Grove was constructed in 1839. Alfred Smee's battery in 1840, the carbon battery of professor Robert Bunsen in 1842. The first is very much used in this country, that of Bunsen on the continent, see Hydrogen Gas complete.

VOLTURNO a river in S Italy, near Capua, near to which Garibaldi and his followers held a strong position. This was furiously assailed by the royal troops on 1 Oct 1860, who were finally repulsed after a desperate struggle, the fiercest in which Garibaldi had yet been engaged. He was aided greatly by a band of Piedmontese from Naples. On 2 Oct general Bixio completed the victory by capturing 2500 fresh Neapolitan troops and dispersing others.

VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS. Public contributions for the support of the British government against the policy and designs of France amounted to two millions and a half sterling in 1798. About 200,000 were transmitted to England from India in 1799. Sir Robert Peel, of Barry, among other contributions of equal amount, subscribed 10,000. Annual Register see Parliamentary Fund. In 1862 nearly 4 million pounds were subscribed in the British empire for the relief of the Lancashire cotton spinners. see Cotton and Lancashire House, where voluntary contributions for benevolent purposes are continually received.

VOLUNTEERS were enrolled in England for the American war, 1778, and especially in consequence of the threatened invasion of revolutionary France, 1793-4. Besides our large army and 85,000 men voted for the war, we subsidised 40,000 Germans, raised on militia to 100,000 men, and armed the citizens as volunteers. The voluntary formed cavalry regiments. Between 1798 and 1804, when this force was of great amount, it numbered 410,000 of which 70,000 were Irish. The number in 1864, 11,400. On 26 Oct 1803, king George III reviewed in Hyde Park 12,401 London volunteers, and on 28 Oct 14,676 more. The English volunteers were, according to official accounts, 341,600 on 1 Jan 1804, see Naval Volunteers. In May, 1859, in consequence of the prevalence of the fear of a French invasion, the formation of volunteer corps of riflemen commenced under the auspices of the government, and by the end of the year many thousands were enrolled in all parts of the kingdom. The volunteers were said to be "a force potentially the strongest defence of England," 19 April, 1870, see Artillery Association, and Naval Artillery Volunteer Force.

YEOMANRY were enrolled by lord Chatham in 1761. The present 49 regiments of cavalry (about 300 each) cost 80,000.

The number of yeomanry 1766, 12,091 1880 11,598, 1885 11,590, 1890 10,097.

[The first Middlesex volunteers were formed in 1803 by the duke of Cumberland's sharpshooters. They retained their organisation as a rifle club, when other volunteers were disbanded. In 1855 they were permitted by the duchess of Kent to take the name of the Royal Victoria Rifle Club.]

* The first regiment of Irish volunteers was formed at Dublin under command of the duke of Leinster 12 Oct 1779. This and generally the amount of 20,000 men and received the unanimous thanks of the houses of lords and commons in Ireland for their patriotism and spirit for coming forward and defending their country. At the period when the force appeared Irish affairs bore a such an aspect manufacturers had declined, and foreign trade had been hurt by prohibition of the export of salted provisions and butter. No notice of the complaints of the people had been taken in the English parliament, when owing to the alarm of an invasion ministers allowed the nation to arm and an immense force was soon raised. The Irish took this occasion to demand a free trade and government and there was no trifling with a country with arms in its hands. The Irish parliament unanimously addressed the king for a free trade, and it was granted 1779.

VOSSEM, PEACE of, between the elector of Brandenburg and Louis XIV. of France; the latter engaged not to assist the Dutch against the elector, signed 6 June, 1673.

VOTING PAPERS. See Dodon's Act. The proposal to use them was negatived in the debates on reform in 1867, adopted by the ballot act in 1873.
See Ballot.

VOUGLÉ or VOUILLE, S.W. France (near Poitiers), where Alaric II, king of the Visigoths, was defeated and slain by Clovis, king of France, 507, who subdued the whole country from the Loire to the Pyrenees. A peace followed between the Franks and Visigoths, who had been settled above one hundred years in that part of Gaul called Septimania. Clovis soon afterwards made Paris his capital.

VOYAGES. It is mythically stated that by order of Pharaoh-Necho, of Egypt, some Phœnician pilots sailed from Egypt down the Arabian Gulf, round what is now called the Cape of Good Hope, entered the Mediterranean by the Straits of Gibraltar, coasted along the north of Africa, and at length arrived in Egypt, after a navigation of about three years, 601 a.c. Herodotus. The first voyage round the world was made by a ship, part of a Spanish squadron which had been under the command of Magellan (who was killed at the Philippine Islands in a skirmish) in 1519-20;
see Circumnavigators, North-West Passage, and Proteus.

VOYSEY ESTABLISHMENT FUND.
The Rev. Charles Voysey having been deprived for heresy (see Church of England, 1871), began a series of services at St. George's hall, Lougham-place, 1 Oct.
1871. The fund for their maintenance was supported by Bp. Hinds of Norwich (retired), Sir John Bowling, and other eminent liberals. He termed his congregation a "Theistic Church."

VULCAN, see Planets. The Greek god Hephaistos answered to the Roman Vulcan.

VULCANITE (vulcanised india-rubber), also termed Ebonite.

VULGATE (from vulgatus, published), a term applied to the Latin version of the Scriptures which is authorized by the council of Trent (1546), and which is attributed to St. Jerome, about 384.
The older version, called the Itala, is said to have been made in the beginning of the 2nd century. A critical edition was printed by order of pope Sixtus V.
in 1590, which, being considered inaccurate, was superceded by the edition of pope Clement VIII. in 1592. The earliest printed vulgate is without date, by Gutenberg and Faust, probably about 1455; the first dated (Fust and Schoeffer) is 1462.

WACHT.

WACHT DES DEUTSCHEN VATERLAND! ("Watch of the German Fatherland"). German national hymn, by Reichardt, first performed 2 Aug. 1855. Very popular during the war 1870-71.

WADHAM COLLEGE (Oxford). Founded by Nicholas Wadham, and Dorothy, his wife, in 1633. In this college, in the chambers of Dr. Wilkins (over the gateway), the founders of the Royal Society frequently met prior to 1658.

WAGER OF BATTLE, see Appeal.

WAGES IN ENGLAND. The wages of sundry workmen were first fixed by act of parliament 25 Edw. III. 1350. Haymakers had but one penny a day. Master carpenters, masons, tilers, and other coverers of houses, had not more than 3d. per day (about 9d. of our money); and their servants, 1½d. Tinners' Statutes.

By the 23 Henry VI. the wages of a ballif of husbandry was 23s. 4d. per annum, and clothing of the price of 5s. with meat and drink, chief hund, carter, or shepherd, 20s., clothing, 4s., common servant of husbandry, 15s., clothing, 40d.; woman-servant, 20s., clothing, 4s.

By the 11 Henry VII., a like rate of wages with a little advance: as, for instance, a free mason, master carpenter, rough mason, bricklayer, master tiler, plumber, glazier, carver or joiner, was allowed from Easter to Michaelmas to take 6d. a day without meat and drink; or, with meat and drink, 4d.; from Michaelmas to Easter, to abate

WAGGONS were rare in the last century. They, with carts, &c., not excepting those used in agriculture, were taxed in 1783. The carriers' waggons are now nearly superseded by the railways.

WAGHORN'S NEW OVERLAND ROUTE TO INDIA. Lieut. Waghorn devoted a large portion of his life to connect India with England. On 31 Oct. 1845, he arrived in London, by a new route, with the Bombay mail of the 1st of that month. His despatches reached Suva on the 10th, and Alexandria on the 20th, whence he proceeded by steamboat to a place twelve miles nearer London than Trieste. He hurried through Austria, Baden, Bavaria, Prussia, and Belgium, and reached London at half-past four on the morning of the first-mentioned day. The authorities of the different countries through which he passed eagerly facilitated his movements. The ordinary express, via Marseilles, reached London 2 Nov. following. Mr. Waghorn subsequently addressed a letter to the Times newspaper, in which he stated that in a couple of years he would bring the Bombay mail to London in 21 days. He died 8 Jan. 1850. On 1 Feb. 1884, at a meeting at the Mansion-house,

Agricultural labourers per week: Warwickshire, 3s. 6d. and 4s.; Devonshire, 5s.; Suffolk, 5s. and 6s.; wool-weavers, about 3s. and 4s. (Maccanlay) about 1665

In 1866 the annual amount of wages paid in the United Kingdom was estimated by Mr. Gladstone at 250,000,000; by Mr. Bass at 350,000,000; and by professor Leone Levi at 418,300,000, earned by 10,697,000 workers, ages 20 to 60.

In 1872-3 many trades struck for increase of wages, and frequently were successful; in 1877-9, unsuccessful.

In 1878 professor Levi estimated that 323,000,000 were earned (by men, 350,000,000; by women, 113,000,000); after deducting for holidays, &c., 422,700,000.

He says, that "In no other country are wages more liberal, but in no other country are they more wastefully used." See Strikes.

London, it was determined to erect a national monument to his memory.

The Overland Mail, which had left Bombay on 1 Dec. 1845, arrived early on the 26th in London, by way of Marseilles and Paris. The speedy arrival was owing to the great exertions made by the French government to show that the route through France was shorter and better.

WAGNERISM, see under Music.

WAGRAM, a village near Vienna, where Napoleon I. totally defeated the archduke Charles, 5, 6 July, 1809. The slaughter on both sides was dreadful; 20,000 Austrians were taken by the French, and the defeated army retired to Moravia. An armistice was signed on the 12th; and on 24 Oct., by a treaty of peace, Austria ceded all her sea-coast to France; the kingdoms of Saxony and Bavaria were enlarged at her expense; part of Poland in Galicia was ceded to Russia; and Joseph Bonaparte was recognised as king of Spain.

WAHABEES OR WAHABITES, a warlike Mahometan reforming sect, considering themselves the only true followers of the prophet, established themselves in Arabia about 1750, under the rule of Abd-el-Wahab, who died 1787. His grandson, Secud, in 1801, defeated an expedition headed by the caliph of Bagdad. In 1803 this sect seized Mecce and Medina, and continued their conquests, although their chief was assassinated in the midst of his victories. His son, Abdallah, long reigned Mahommed Ali, pacha of Egypt, but in 1818 was defeated and taken prisoner by Ibrahim Pacha, who sent him to Constantinople, where he was put to death. The sect, now flourishing, is well described by Mr W Gifford Palgrave, in his "Journey and Residence in Arabia in 1862-3," published in 1865. It is influential in India, and is suspected of a tendency to insurrection.

WAHLSTATT, see Katschah.

WAIFS and STRAYS (children) Church of England Central Society for providing Homes for Waifs and Strays, founded 1882. The society was very active in 1892, being supported by the bishops and clergy.

WAITS, the night minstrels who perform shortly before Christmas. The name was given to the musicians attached to the king's court. We find that a company of waits was established at Exeter in 1400 to 'pipe the watch'. The waits in London and Westminster were long officially recognised by the corporation.

WAKEFIELD (W Yorkshire), an ancient town. Near it a battle was fought between the adherents of Margaret, the queen of Henry VI., and the duke of York, in which the latter was slain, and 3000 Yorkists fell upon the field 31 Dec 1460. The earl of Warwick supported the cause of the duke's son, the earl of March, afterwards Edward IV., and the civil war was continued. An art and industrial exhibition was opened at Wakefield 30 Aug 1865. The Bishops' act, authorising the establishment of a see at Wakefield was passed 16 Aug 1874. The required funds subscribed Jan 1888. Population, 1881, 30,854; 1891 33,140.

Bishopric founded by the queen 17 May 1880. The Rev. W. H. Bon (suffragan bishop of it) appointed first bishop Feb 1888.

WAKES, the ancient popular festival on the saint's day to commemorate the dedication of the church, regulated in 1536, but gradually became obsolete.

WALBROOK CHURCH (London), a masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren, completed in 1679. There was a church here in 1135, and a new church was erected in 1429.

WALCHEREN (an island at the mouth of the Scheldt, Holland). The unfortunate expedition of the British to this island in 1809 consisted of 35 ships of the line, and 200 smaller vessels, principally transports, and 40,000 land forces, the latter under the command of the earl of Chatham, and the fleet under Sir Richard Strachan. For a long time the destination of the expedition remained secret but before 28 July, 1809, when it set sail the French journals had announced that Walcheren was the point of attack. Flushing was invested in August, a dreadful bombardment followed, and the place was taken 15 Aug., but no suggestion on the part of the naval commander, nor urging on the part of the officers, could induce the earl to vigorous action, until the period of probable success was gone, and necessity obliged him to return with as many of the troops as disease and an unhealthy climate had spared. The place was evacuated, 23 Dec 1809. The house of commons instituted an inquiry, and Lord Chatham resigned his post of master-general of the ordnance, to prevent greater disgrace, but the policy of ministers in planning the expedition was, nevertheless, approved. The following epigram, of which various readings exist, appeared at the time —

"Lord Chatham [or the warrior earl] with [his] salve drawn

Stood waiting for Sir Richard Strachan

Sir Richard longing [or eager] to be at em,

Stood waiting for the earl of Chatham

WALDECK AND PYRMONT, united German principalities, established in 1682. The late reigning family claim descent from the Saxon hero, Witkind, who flourished about 772. Prince George Victor, born 14 Jan 1831, succeeded his father, George, 15 May, 1845. His son, Frederic, born 20 Jan 1865. On 22 Oct 1867, the states approved a treaty of annexation, and the administration was transferred to Prussia, 1 Jan 1868.

WALDENSES (also called Waldenses, Vallenses and Vaudois), a sect inhabiting the Cottian Alps, derives its name according to some authors, from Peter de Waldo, of Lyons (1170). They had a translation of the Bible. The Waldenses settled in the valleys of Piedmont about 1175, but were frequently dreadfully persecuted, especially in the 17th century, when Charles I of England interceded for them (1627-9) and Oliver Cromwell by threats (1655-6) obtained them some degree of toleration. All the Waldenman Barbes or pastors, save two, died in the great plague of 1630. Gilles and Gros went to Geneva and Lausanne for Swiss Calvinist ministers to fill the vacancies. The new ministers were no sooner inducted than they deposed the surviving Barbes and abolished all the distinctive teaching and usages of the community, substituting the Genevese model. They were permitted to have a church at Turin Dec 1853. In March, 1868, it was stated that there were in Italy 28 ordained Waldensian ministers, and 30 other teachers.

WALES, Cambria, Cymru, the land of the Cymry, called by the Romans Britannia Secunda. Welsh and Wales are corruptions of Teutonic epithets applied to foreigners, especially Gauls. After the Roman emperor Honorius gave up Britain, Vortigern was elected king of South Britain. He invited over the Saxons to defend his country against the Picts and Scots, but the Saxons perditionally sent for reinforcements, consisting of Saxons, Danes, and Angles, by which they made themselves masters of South Britain. Many of the Britons retired to Wales, and defended themselves against the Saxons in their inaccessible mountains, about 447. In this state Wales remained unconquered till Henry II subdued South Wales in 1157, and in 1282 Edward I entirely reduced the whole country, and ended being put to its independence by the death of Llewelyn, the last prince. In 1284 the queen gave birth to a son at Caernarvon, whom Edward styled prince of Wales, now title of the heir to the crown of Great Britain. Wales was united and incorporated with England by act of parliament, 1536, see Britain, End: and Population 1891, 1,518,914.

Ostorius Scapula, proprietor of Britain, defeats the Cymry. A.D. 50.
The supreme authority in Britannia Secunda entrusted to Sutorius Paulinus, who caused desolating wars. 58-62.

* The statute of Wales enacted at Rhuddlan 29 March, 1284 (or March 1283) alleges that Divine Providence has now removed all obstacles and transferred wholly and entirely to the king's dominion the land of Wales and its inhabitants heretofore subject unto him in feudal right. The ancient Laws were to be preserved in civil causes but the law of inheritance was to be changed, and the English criminal law to be put in force. Sancels of England.

* At the commencement of the civil war, Pembroke castle was the only Welsh fortress in the possession of the parliament, and it was entrusted to the command of col. Laugharne. In 1648 he, and colonels Poyer and Foyer, influenced the cause of the king, and made Pembroke their headquarters: after the defeat at St. Fagan's, they retired to the castle, followed by an army led by Cromwell. They capitulated, after having endured great sufferings from want of water. Laugharne, Poyer, and Foyer were tried by a court-martial, and condemned to death, but Cromwell having been induced to spare the lives of two of them, it was ordered that they should draw lots for the favour, and three papers were folded up, on two of which were written the words, "Life given by God," the third was left blank. The latter was drawn by colonel Poyer, who was shot in London accordingly on the above mentioned day, after long imprisonment. Pennant.

ENGLISH PRINCES OF WALES *

- 1284 Edward Plantagenet (afterwards king Edward II) son of Edward I, born in Caernarvon Castle on the 25th April, 1284. It is asserted that immediately after his birth he was presented by his father to the Welsh chieftains as their future sovereign, the king holding up the royal infant in his arms, and saying, "This is the Welsh language, 'Eiddo Dyw,' literally in English, 'This is your man,' but signifying, 'This is your countryman and king.' See, however, 'Isid. Lyc.'"
- 1301 Edward of Carnarvon made prince of Wales and earl of Chester
- 1343 Edward the Black Prince.
- 1376 Richard, his son (afterwards Richard II).
- 1399 Henry (afterwards Henry V.), son of Henry IV.
- 1454 Edward, son of Henry VI., slain at Tewkesbury, 4 May, 1471
- 1471 Edward (afterwards Edward V.), son of Edward IV.
- 1483 Edward, son of Richard III., died in 1484.
- 1489 Arthur, son of Henry VII., died in 1502.

* WALES, PRINCESS OF This title was held, some author. say, during the early period of her life, by the princess Mary of England, eldest daughter of Henry VIII., and afterwards queen Mary I. She was created, they state, by her father prince of Wales, in order to combine the Welsh people and keep alive the name, and was afterwards princess of Wales in her own right, a rank she enjoyed until the birth of a son to Henry, who was afterwards Edward VI., born in 1537. This is denied by Banks.

WALLER'S PLOT Edmund Waller, the poet, and others, conspired to disarm the London militia and let in the royalists, May, 1643. The plan was detected and punished, June-July, 1643. Waller betrayed his confederates, and was suffered to emigrate.

WALLISS VOYAGE Captain Wallis sailed from England on his voyage round the world 26 July, 1766, and returned to England, 19 May, 1768.

WALLOON This name was given to those inhabitants of the low countries who retained the ancient German language and to those who adopted the Walloon language (based on the Gaulish), which though surviving as a patois, has been supplanted in France by the modern French. The language of the Walloon protestant refugees in 1556 was French.

A church was given to Walloon refugees by Queen Elizabeth at Jan Wilch and this still have one at Canterbury. The frontier line of Flemish and German towns may be traced from the north through Gravelines to IJzerburg, that of the Wallon towns from Calais to Metz.

WALLS, see Roman Walls, China.

WALNUT-TREE has long existed in England. The black walnut-tree (Juglans nigra) was brought to this country from North America before 1620.

WALPOLE'S ADMINISTRATIONS

* Near Welwyn in Hertfordshire there was the largest walnut tree on record. It was felled in 1627 and from it were cut nineteen loads of planks and as much was sold to a gunsmith in London as cost 20*l*. Carriage boxes which there were thirty loads of nuts and trunk boxes. When standing it covered 76 poles of ground, a space equal to 2000 square yards statute measure.

Mr Walpole (afterwards Sir Robert, and Earl of Oxford) was born in 1676, became secretary-at-war in 1708, was expelled the house of commons on a charge of misappropriating the public money, 1711, committed to the Tower, 17 Jan 1712, became first lord of the treasury, 17 Jan 1712, became the orator in Oct 1715. He resigned, on a disunion of the cabinet, in 1717, bringing in the sinking fund bill on the day of his resignation. On the Earl of Sunderland retiring in 1721, he resumed his office, and held it till Feb 1742. He died 18 March, 1745.

WAR, GAME OF (German, Kriegspiel), based on the game of chess, was described in a pamphlet in 1780, and rules for it laid down by Homanenrathe von Reinswits about 1820, and published by his son in 1824-8. Capt. (now sir) Evelyn Baring published a translation of works on the subject in 1872. A society (including von Moltke) was formed at Magdeburg to study it. Prince Arthur (now duke of Connaught) lectured on this game at Dover, 13 March, 1872.

WARBECK'S INSURRECTION. Perkin Warbeck, the son of a Florentine Jew, to whom Edward IV. had stood godfather, was persuaded by Margaret, duchess of Burgundy, sister to Richard III., to personate her nephew Richard, Edward V.'s brother, which he did first in Ireland, where he landed, 1492. The imposture was discovered by Henry VII. 1493. Some writers consider that Warbeck was not an impostor.

Warbeck attempted to land in Kent, with 600 men, 169 were taken prisoners, and executed, July, 1495.
 Recommended by the king of France to James IV. of Scotland, who gave him his kinswoman, lord Huntley's daughter, in marriage, when he assumed the title of Richard IV. James IV. invaded England in his favour, 1496.

Left Scotland, and went to Bodmin, in Cornwall, where 3000 joined him, Sept. 1497.
 On the approach of Henry took sanctuary at Beaulieu; surrendered; taken to London, Oct. 1497.
 Held to have been set in the stocks at Westminster and Chancery, and sent to the Tower, June, 1499.

Accused of plotting with the earl of Warwick to escape out of the Tower, by murdering the lieutenant, Aug.; the plot failed, and he was hanged at Tyburn, 23 Nov.; the earl beheaded, 28 Nov. 1499.

WARBURG (N. Germany). Here the French were defeated by the duke of Brunswick and the allies, 31 July, 1760.

WARDIAN CASES. In 1829, Mr. N. B. Ward, from observing a small fern and grass growing in a closed glass bottle, in which he had placed a chrysalis covered with moist earth, was led to construct his well-known closely glazed cases, which afford to plants light, heat, and moisture, and exclude deleterious gases, smoke, &c. They are particularly adapted for ferns. In 1833 they were first employed for the transmission of plants to Sydney, &c., with great success, and professor Faraday lectured on the subject in 1838.

WARDMOTES, meetings of the citizens of London in their wards, where they elect annually their common councilmen. The practice is said to have begun in 1386. They had previously assembled in Guildhall; see Plough Monday.

WARRANTS, GENERAL, do not specify the name of the accused. They were declared to be illegal by lord chief justice Pratt, 6 Dec. 1763, in relation to the seizure and commitment of Mr. Wilkes for a libel on the king; see North Briton.

"Reciprocity" treaty regulating trade with Canada 7 June 1854.

Referring the Alabama claims and the San Juan boundary question to arbitration, settling disputes respecting fisheries (see Fisheries and Fishing) and laying down three rules asserting that it is the duty of a neutral state, which desires to remain at peace with belligerents and to enjoy the rights of neutrality, to abstain from taking any part in the war by affording military aid to one or both of the belligerents and to take care that no acts which would constitute such co-operation in the war be committed by any one within its territory 8 May 1871.

WASMIUM (named from the royal house of Wasm or Vasa), a supposed new metal, discovered by F Bahr, of Stockholm, in 1862. In Nov 1863 Kankies declared it to be a compound of didymium, yttrium, and terbium.

WASTE LANDS The enclosure of waste lands and commons, in order to promote agriculture, first began in England about the year 1547, and gave rise to Ket's rebellion, 1549. Enclosures were again promoted by the authority of parliament, 1785. The waste lands in England were estimated in 1794 to amount to 14 millions of acres, of which there were taken into cultivation, 2,837,476 acres before June, 1801. In 1841, there were about 6,700,000 acres of waste land, of which more than half was thought to be capable of improvement, see Agriculture.

WATCH OF LONDON, at night, appointed 1253, proclaimed the hour with a bell before the introduction of public clocks. Harde The old watch was discontinued, and a new police (on duty day and night) commenced, 29 Sept 1829, see Police.

WATCHES are said to have been first invented at Nuremberg 1477, although it is affirmed that Robert, king of Scotland, had a watch about 1310. Watches first used in astronomical observations by Purbach 1500. Authors assert that the emperor Charles V was the first who had anything that might be called a watch, though some call it a small table clock 1530. Watches first brought to England from Germany in 1577. A watch which belonged to Queen Elizabeth is preserved in the library of the Royal Institution London.

Spring pocket watches (watches properly so-called) have had their invent on ascribed to Dr Hook in the English and to W. Huygens in the Dutch. Dr Derham in his Art of Geometry says that Dr Hook was the inventor and he appears certainly to have produced what is called the perpetual watch about 1658. Many amongst other inventions from an inscription on one of the double balance watches preserved to Charles II. Robert Hook invented 1658. F. Tompon built 1673. Repeating watches invented by Barlow. Harrison's first time piece produced (see Harrison) 1734. Watches and clockwork made in 1797.

The tax was repealed in 1798. See Clocks. Arrangements made at Kew observatory for testing high class watches and granting graduated certificates, fees, 21 18, 108 6d and annual 1884.

WATER Thales of Miletus, founder of the Ionic sect, considered water to be the original principle of everything, about 594 B C. Stanley-Cavendish and Watt demonstrated that water is composed of 8 parts of oxygen and 1 part of hydrogen 1781-4. Water was decomposed into oxygen and hydrogen gases by Lavoisier 1831. The voltaic battery by Nicholson and Carlisle 1800 by the heat of the oxy hydrogen flame by W R Grove 1846. In freezing the contracts till it is reduced to 40° or 40° Fahr. it then begins to expand till it becomes ice at 32°.

Water was first conveyed to London by leaden pipes 22 Henry III 1237. Slowly it took nearly fifty years to complete it the whole being finished and Chiswick conduit erected only in 1865.

The New River water brought to London from Chadwell and Amwell in Hertfordshire at an immense expense by Sir Hugh Myddelton, in 1609-13. The city was supplied with its water by conveyances of wooden pipes in the streets and small leaden ones to the houses and the New River Company was incorporated 1606. Solate a queen Anne's time there were water-carriers at Aldgate pump.

The water works at Chelsea completed, and the company incorporated 1722. London bridge ancient water works destroyed by fire 29 Oct 1779. An act to supply the metropolis with water 25 & 26 Vict c 84 was passed, 1 July 1850. This act was amended by act passed 21 Aug 1871. The companies were bound to provide a constant supply when required, the owner or occupier of the house to provide the prescribed fittings.

[The supply is now considered to be much improved in quality and quantity.]

WATER-COLOUR PAINTING was gradually raised from the hard dry style of the last century to its present brilliancy, by the efforts of great Turner, Pyne, Cattermole, Proust, &c., within the present century. The Water-Colour Society's exhibition which began in 1805, was made Royal in 1881, the diplomas were to be signed by the queen after Nov 1882. The Institute of Painters in Water Colours, established about 1837 (made Royal in 1883), open new galleries in Piccadilly, and propose to give free instruction, 27 April, 1883

Dr. John Percy's unique historical collection of water-colour drawings was sold for 8390l re-ported. 26 April, 1890

WATERFORD (S. Ireland), built about 875, was totally destroyed by fire in 981. Rebuilt and considerably enlarged by Strongbow in 1171, and still further in the reign of Henry VII, who granted considerable privileges to the citizens. Richard II. landed and was crowned here in 1399, in 1690, James II. embarked from hence for France, after the battle of the Boyne, and William III. resided here twice, and confirmed its privileges. Memorable storm here, 18 April, 1792. The cathedral of Waterford dedicated to the blessed Trinity, was first built by the Osmens, and by Malahus, the first bishop of Waterford, after his return from England from his consecration, 1096. This see was united with that of Lismore in 1563. It was valued in the King's books, by an extent returned 29 Henry VIII., at 72l 8s 1d Irish per annum. By stat. 3 & 4 W. IV., c. 37 (the Irish Church Temporalities Act), the see of Waterford and Lismore was united with the see of Cashel and Emdin, 14 Aug 1813. The interior of the cathedral, organ, &c., were destroyed by fire 25 Oct 1871. Population, 1891, 21,603

WATER GAS, see Gas-lights

WATER-GLASS a name given to a liquid mixture of sand (silica) and one of the alkalis (potash or soda). Glauber (De Lithiase) mentions a similar mixture in 1644. Dr. Von Fuchs, the modern inventor, gave an account of his process in 1825, and Mr. Frederick Ransome, of Ipswich, ignorant of Von Fuchs's discovery, patented a mode of preparing water glass in 1845, which he has since greatly improved upon. In 1857, M. Kuhlmann, of Lillie, published a pamphlet setting forth the advantageous employment of water-glass in hardening porous stone and in steam-boilers (Water-glass). It has been applied to the exterior of many buildings in France and England. The memoirs of Von Fuchs and Kuhlmann were translated and printed in England, in 1859, by direction of the prince consort.

WATERING STREETS. Mr. Cooper's plan for using solutions of chloride of lime or of sodium (which dries slowly and attracts moisture and ammonia and other gases, and combine them with the material of the road) was partially used in the parish of St. Mary-le-bone in 1868, and also in Liverpool, Boston, and other towns. The plan was ordered to be tried in Westminster in July, 1870.

WATERLOO, in Belgium, the site of the great battle, on Sunday, 18 June, 1815, between the French army, of 71,047 men and 246 guns, under Napoleon, and the allies, commanded by the dukes of Wellington, the latter, with 67,661 men and 156 guns, resisted the various attacks of the enemy from about ten in the morning until five in the afternoon. About that time, 16,000 Prussians reached the field of battle, and by seven, the forces under Blücher amounted to above 50,000 men, with 104 guns. Wellington then moved forward his whole army. A total rout ensued, and the carnage was immense. Of the British (23,991), 93 officers and 1916 men were killed and missing, and 363 officers and 4560 men wounded—total, 6932, and the total loss of the allied army amounted to 4206 killed, 14,539 wounded, and 4231 missing, making 22,976 hors de combat. Napoleon, quitting the wreck of his army, returned to Paris, and, finding it impossible to raise another, abdicated. P. Nicolas. Napoleon attributed his defeat to the failures of marshal Grouchy, Wellington, and himself. Proposed monument over the British officers and men who died of their wounds, 7 Jan. 1888. By the side of the chapel of Waterloo, which was unharmed by shot or shell on 18 June 1815, Marlborough cut off a large division of the French forces 17 Aug. 1795. The conquerors on the same field are the only British commanders whose career brought them to dukesdoms.

The Waterloo monument over the remains of the officers and men who fell in the campaign of 1815 in a cemetery at Brussels, erected by queen Victoria, was unveiled by the duke of Cambridge

WATERLOO BRIDGE, LONDON. A bridge over this part of the Thames was repeatedly suggested during the last century, but no actual preparations to carry it into effect were made till 1806, when Mr G. Dodd procured an act of parliament, and gave the present site, plan, and dimensions of the bridge, but, in consequence of some disagreement with the committee, he was superseded by Mr John Rennie, who completed this noble structure. It was commenced 11 Oct. 1811, and opened 18 June, 1817, on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, when the prince regent, the duke of Wellington, and other distinguished personages, were present. Its length within the abutments is 1242 feet, its width within the balustrades is 42 feet, and the span of each arch, of which there are nine, is 120 feet. Bought for 475,000*l.* by metropolitan board of works, opened toll free, 5 Oct. 1878, lit by electric light from 10 Oct. 1879.

On Oct. 9, 1857, two youths, named Kisby, found on one of the abutments of the bridge a carpet bag containing human bones and flesh which had been cut up, salted, and boiled, and some foreign clothes. No line could be found respecting these remains, which were interred in Woking cemetery.

WATERLOW PARK, 8 Hampstead or Highgate, was presented to the metropolis with 6,000*l.* to the London county council, by sir Sydney H. Waterlow, 12 Nov. 1889. The park was opened to the public by sir John Lubbock, chairman of the council, 17 Oct. 1891.

WATER-MILLS, used for grinding corn, are said to have been invented by Belshazzar, the general of Justinian, while besieged in Rome by the Goths, 555. The ancients parched their corn, and pounded it in mortars. Afterwards mills were invented, which were turned by men and beasts with great labour, yet Pliny mentions wheels turned by water. See Telo-dynamic transmitter.

WATERSPOUT. Two waterspouts fell on the Glaz mountains in Germany, and caused dreadful devastation to Hattenbach and many other villages, many persons perished, 13 July, 1827. A waterspout at Glazneek, near Killybeg, in Ireland, passed over a farm of Mr John McCarthy, destroying farm-houses and other buildings, seventeen persons perished, 4 Aug. 1831. The estimated length of one seen near Calcutta, 27 Sept. 1855, was 1000 feet. It lasted ten minutes, and was absorbed upwards. One seen on 24 Sept. 1856, burst into heavy rain. The town of Munkács, Hungary, destroyed by a waterspout, great loss of life and property, 30 Aug. 1878. 61 persons said to have been killed by a waterspout in Algeria, Oct. 1881. A waterspout at Arequipa, Peru, caused immense damage, several persons drowned, 14 Feb., one at Pachaca, Mexico, 30 deaths, 27 Sept. 1884, another near Lagos, very destructive, 6 or 7 June, 1885. Destructive waterspout at Swansea, 4 Sept. 1886, another on Batescombe hills, Dorsetshire, greatly damaged the villages of Chetmoles, Cerne, and Mintern, 7 June, 1889.

WAVE PRINCIPLE (in accordance with which the curves of the hull of a ship should be adapted to the curves of a wave of the sea) formed the subject of experiments begun by Mr John Scott Russell in 1832, with the view of increasing the speed of ships. Colonel Beaufort is said to have spent 30,000*l.* in researches upon this matter. It was also taken up by the British Association, who have published reports of the investigations. The principle has been adopted by naval architects, see Undulatory Theory, and Yacht.

WAVERLEY NOVELS. The publication of the series began with "Waverley, or, 'Tis Sixty Years since," in 1814, and closed with "Tales of my Landlord," fourth series, in 1831. The authorship was acknowledged by sir Walter Scott, at a dinner, 23 Feb. 1827. The original MSS. of several of Scott's poems and novels were sold by auction by Christie and Manson for 1255 guineas, 6 July, 1867.

WAWZ or WAWKE (Poland). The Poles under Skrzynecki attacked the Russians at Wawz, and after two days' hard fighting, all the Russian positions were carried by storm, and they retreated with the loss of 12,000 men and 2000 prisoners, 31 March, 1831. The loss of the Poles was small but their triumph was soon followed by defeat and ruin.

WAX came into use for candles in the 12th century, and wax candles were esteemed a luxury in 1300, being but little used. In China, candles of vegetable wax have been in use for centuries, see Candleberry. The wax tree, Ligustrum lucidum was brought from China before 1794. SEALING WAX was not brought into use in England until about 1556. Its use has been much superseded by the introduction of adhesive envelopes, about 1844.

WAXWORK. Exhibition of models in wax were popular in the 17th and 18th centuries. The collection of wax figures exhibited by Mrs. Salmon at Aldgate, early in the last century, were removed to Fleet-street and shown there till 1812, when they were sold, it is said, for 30*l.* Madame Tussaud, a skilful modeller, exhibited her remarkable collection of models and casts of eminent persons with costumes and other interesting relics in the boulevard du Temple, Paris, 1785. In 1802 she exhibited her collection at the Lyceum, Strand, London, and afterwards at other places. The interest of the exhibition has been energetically sustained for many years at Baker-street, London, W., and lately at Marylebone-road, by Madame Tussaud and her family; she died 15 April, 1850, aged 90. Early in 1869 the collection was purchased by a company, Mr John Townsend being engaged as manager

Mr Louis Tussaud opened a new exhibition of wax works at 207, Regent-street, 21 Dec. 1830; it was destroyed by fire, on June, 1831, estimated loss, 20,000.

WEAVING appears to have been practised in China more than a thousand years before it was known in Europe or Asia. The Egyptians ascribed the art to Isis, the Greeks to Minerva, and the Peruvians to the wife of Manco Capac. Our Saviour's vest, or coat, had not any seam, being woven from the top throughout, in one whole piece. The print of a frame for weaving such a vest may be seen in Calmel's Dictionary, under the word Vestments. Two weavers from Brabant settled at York, where they manufactured woollens, which, says king Edward, "may prove of great benefit to us and our subjects" (1331). Flemish dyers, cloth drapers, linen-makers, silk-throsters, &c., settled at Canterbury, Norwich, Colchester, Southampton, and other places, on account of the duke of Alva's persecution, 1567; see Loom, and Electric Loom

WEDDINGS. Silver weddings are celebrated after a union of 25 years, golden weddings after a union of 50 years, and diamond weddings after a union of 60 years, some apply it to 75 years. John, king of Saxony, celebrated his golden wedding, 10 Nov. 1872

WEDDING-RINGS were used by the ancients, and put upon the wedding finger, from a supposed connection with a vein there with the heart. According to Pliny they were made of iron, in the time of Tertullian of gold. Wedding-rings are to be of standard gold, by statute, 1855, see Adriatic

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. These and the stamping of gold and silver money, are attributed to Pheidon, tyrant of Argos, 895 B.C., see Arundelian Marbles. Weights were originally taken from grains of wheat, the lowest being still called a grain. Chalmers. See Cubit

Much information is given by W. H. W. Chisholm in his work "On the Science of Weighing and Measuring" 1877

The Jews ascribed weights and measures to Cam, the Egyptian to Thoth or Thoth, the Greeks, to Hermes (the Roman Mercury)

The basis of ancient measures was the natural proportions of the human body, the digit, or breadth of the middle part of the first joint of the fore finger, being the lowest unit of the scale

The Egyptian cubit (six palms), under the Pharaoh, was about 18 1/2 English inches, the cubit of Ptolemy about 21 1/2 inches, he determined the length of a stadium, and of a degree

The sacred cubit of the Jews (Nathan), 24 1/2 inches. Assyrian weights are described by Mr Layard in his "Nineveh"

The standard measure was originally kept at Winchester by the law of king Edgar Standards of weights and measures were provided for the whole kingdom of England by the statute of London 9 Rich. I.

A public weighing machine was set up in London, and all commodities ordered to be weighed by the city officer, called the weigh master who was to do justice between buyer and seller, stat. 3 Edw. II. (Stone)

Edward III. ordered that there should be one weight, masure, and yard, throughout the kingdom

First statute, directing the use of avoirdupois weight, 24 Hen. VIII.

Weights and measures ordered to be examined by the justices at quarter-sessions, 35 Geo. III.

Again regulated.

Statute for establishing a uniformity of weights and measures, 1824, took effect throughout the United Kingdom

New acts relating thereto passed in 1834, 1835, 1855, and in

16 & 17 Viet. c. 29, regulates the weights to be used in the sale of bullion, and adopts the use of the Troy ounce

A commission (consisting of Mr G. B. Airy, Gen. E. Sabine, Lord Ross, Mr T. Graham and others), appointed to examine the standards

3rd report of the standards commission states that errors exist in official standards, dated 24 July, 1866

A new Weights and Measures act passed to enforce uniformity in all markets in the United Kingdom, and abolish local measures, 8 Aug. 1878, this act was combined with another passed 26 July, 1889

WESLEYAN METHODISTS, a sect founded by John Wesley (born 1703, died 1791) and his brother Charles, who in 1727 with a few other students formed themselves into a small society for the purpose of mutual education by religious exercises. From their strictness of life they were called Methodists, in 1729. John Wesley went to Georgia in America, in 1735, with a view of converting the Indians. On his return to England, in 1738, he commenced itinerant preaching, and gathered many followers. On finding many churches shut against him, he built spacious meeting-houses in London, Bristol, and other places. The Wesleyan Methodist society, as such, began in 1739. For some time he was united with George Whitefield, but differing with him respecting the doctrine of election, they separated in 1741. see Whitefield. Wesley was almost continually engaged in travelling through the United Kingdom. His two leading doctrines were the instantaneousness of conversion, and Christian perfection, or deliverance from all sin. His society was well organised, and he preserved his influence over it to the last. "His genius for government was not inferior to that of Richelieu." Macaulay. The deed of declaration, establishing the conference, is dated 26 Feb 1784. In 1851 there were 428 circuits in Great Britain, with between 13,000 and 14,000 local or lay preachers, and about 920 itinerant preachers, and 6579 chapels.

The Conference the highest Wesleyan court, till lately composed of 200 ministers, who meet annually. It was instituted by John Wesley in 1784. At the centenary of the existence of Methodism 226 cool were collected to be expended on the objects of the society. 1839

WESTERN AUSTRALIA, formerly SWAN RIVER SETTLEMENT, which was projected by colonel Peel in 1828. Regulations issued from the colonial office, and Captain Stirling, appointed lieutenant-governor, Jan 17, 1829, arrived at the appointed site in August following. The three towns of Perth, Freemantle, and Guildford were founded same year. In March, 1830, fifty ships, with 2000 emigrants, with property amounting to 1,000,000, had arrived before hardly any dwellings had been erected or land surveyed. The more energetic settlers left for home, or the neighbouring colonies, and the colony languished for twenty years for want of suitable inhabitants—the first settlers, from their previous habits and rank in life, proving unfit for the rough work of colonisation. In 1848, the colonists requested that convicts might be sent out to them, and in 1849 a band arrived, who were kindly received and well treated. The best results ensued. By 1853, 2000 had arrived, and the inhabitants of Perth had requested that 1000 should be sent out annually. The reception of convicts is to cease in after-years, in consequence of the energetic opposition of the other Australian colonies (1865).—The settlement of King George's Sound was founded in 1826 by the government of New South Wales. It was used as a military station for four years. In 1830, the home government ordered the settlement to be transferred to Swan River. Since the establishment of steam communication, the little town of Albany here, employed as a coal-station, has become a thriving sea-port. It possesses an excellent harbour, used by whalers. A journal called the Freemantle Gazette was published here in March, 1831. Bishop of Perth founded 1857. WESTERN CHURCH (called also the LATIN, or ROMAN) broke off communion with the Greek or Eastern Church, 653, see Greek Church. Its history is mainly comprised in that of the popes and of the European kingdoms, see Popes. This church was disturbed by the Arian heresy about 345 and 500, by Pelagianism, about 400, by the introduction of image-worship about 600, by the injunction of the councils of the clergy and the rise of the monastic orders about 649, by the contests between the emperors and the popes respecting ecclesiastical investitures between 1073 and 1173; by the rise and progress of the Reformation in the 15th and 16th centuries, by the contests between the Jesuits and Jansenists in the 17th and 18th centuries, and by the progress of modern philosophy and rationalism, and by ultramontanism, in the 19th, see Roman Catholics.

WESTERN EMPIRE. The Roman empire was divided into Eastern and Western by Diocletian in 296, but was reunited under Constantine in 340. It was again divided into Eastern and Western by Valentinian and Valens, the former having the Western portion or Rome, 364, see Eastern Empire, Italy, and Rome.

WESTMINSTER, so called on account of its western situation with regard to St. Paul's cathedral, or from there being formerly a monastery named East Minster, on the hill now called Great Tower-hill. This city joins London at Temple-bar. Formerly Westminster was called Thorney, or Thorny Island: and in ancient times Canute had a palace here, burnt in 1263. Westminster and London were one mile asunder in 1603, when the houses were thatched, and there were mud walls in the Strand. It is said that the great number of Scotsmen who came over after the accession of James I. occasioned the building of Westminster, and united it with London. Howell's Londonopolis. WESTMINSTER BISHOPRIC AND DEANERY. At the dissolution of monasteries, Westminster abbey was valued at 3977l. per annum; king Henry VIII. in 1539 erected it into a deanery; and in 1540 into a bishopric, and appointed Thomas Thirlby prelate. He was translated to Norwich in 1550, and with him ended the bishopric of Westminster; Middlesex, his diocese, being restored to London. The dean presided until the accession of Mary, who restored the abbot. Elizabeth displaced the abbot, and erected the abbey into a collegiate church of a dean and twelve prebendaries, as it still continues. On the revival of the order of the Bath, in 1725, the dean of Westminster was appointed dean of that order, which honour has been continued. Dr. Nicholas Wiseman was created archbishop of Westminster by the pope Pius IX. 30 Sept. 1850; see Papal Aggression. Dr. Wiseman died 8 Feb. 1865; Henry Manning was consecrated his successor 8 June, following; he died 14 Jan. 1892, and was succeeded by Dr. Herbert Vaughan about 30 March; enthroned 8 May; invested with the pallium, the first since 1556, 16 Aug., 1892. WESTMINSTER BRIDGES. The handsome old bridge was begun (after a design of M. Labeyrie), 13 Sept. 1738, the first stone laid 29 Jan. 1738-9; opened for passengers 18 Nov. 1750, cost 486,650*l*. It was built of Portland stone, and crossed the river where the breadth is 1223 feet.

Owing to the sinking of several of its piers, most of the buttresses on both sides were removed, to relieve the structure of its weight.
By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 46 the estates of its commissioners were transferred to her majesty's commissioners of works, who were empowered to remove the then existing bridge, and build a new narrow (near the old one) 4 Aug. 1853

The contract required the completion of the works by 1 June, 1857
The works were suspended for a time, in consequence of the failure of Messrs Mure the contractors. The government eventually undertook the building, which they entrusted to Mr. Thomas Pugs, the engineer. One half of the new bridge was opened for use early in 1860, the whole on 24 May, 1862

WESTMINSTER CONFESSION OF FAITH AND CATECHISMS were drawn up by the "Assembly of Divines" (partly consisting of laymen), who sat by authority of parliament in Henry VII's chapel, Westminster, from 1643 to 1647. These have ever since been the doctrinal standards of Scotch Presbyterians.

WESTMINSTER HALL (London), first built by William Rufus in 1097, for a banqueting-hall, and here in 1099, on his return from Normandy, "he kept his feast of Whitsuntide very royally." The hall became famous before the reign of Richard II., who repaired it in 1397, raised the walls, altered the windows, and added a new roof, as well as a stately porch and other buildings. In 1236 Henry III. on New-year's day caused 6000 poor persons to be entertained in this hall, and in the other rooms of his palace, as a celebration of queen Eleanor's coronation, and here Richard II. held his Christmas festival in 1397, when the number of the guests each day the feast lasted was 10,000 Stow. The courts of law were established here by king John. Ibidem Westminster hall was stated to be the largest room in Europe un-supported by pillars (except a hall of justice at Padua), it is 270 feet in length, 74 feet broad. The hall underwent a general repair in 1802. Concurrently with the erection of the palace of Westminster, many improvements and alterations have lately been made in this magnificent hall. The Volunteer Rifle corps were drilled in the hall in the winter of 1859, and since. The courts of law removed to the new buildings in the Strand Jan. 1883. Restorations proposed by Mr J. L. Pearson, R.A., July, 1884. The roof and windows greatly damaged by an explosion of dynamite (?) about 2 p.m. 24 Jan. 1885.

WESTMORELAND This county and Cumberland were granted as a fief to Malcolm of Scotland by Edward the Elder in 945, but resumed by Henry III. in 1237. Neville, earl of Westmoreland, revolted against Elizabeth in 1569, and was attainted in 1570.

WESTPHALIA (Germany). This duchy belonged in former times to the dukes of Saxony, and afterwards became subject to the archbishop of Cologne. On the secularization in 1802, it was made over to Hesse Darmstadt, and in 1814 was ceded for an equivalent to Prussia. The kingdom of Westphalia, one of the temporary kingdoms of Bonaparte, composed of conquests from Prussia, Hesse-Cassel, Hanover, and the smaller states to the west of the Elbe, was created by decree 18 Aug. 1806, and Jerome Bonaparte appointed king, 1 Dec. 1807. Hanover was annexed to it, 1 March, 1810. The kingdom was abolished in 1813, and the counties were restored to their former rulers.

Through strike of the coal miners for increased pay and shorter hours of labour, Hien Krupp, of Essen, had to stop his iron and steel works at several places for want of coal about 4 May. WESTPHALIA or MÜNSTER, PEACE OF; the truces signed at Osnaburg 6 Aug., and at Munster 23 Oct. 1648, between France, the emperor, and Sweden, Spain continuing the war against France. By this peace (ending the thirty years' war) the principle of a balance of power in Europe was first recognised, Alsace given to France, and part of Pomerania and some other districts to Sweden, the Lower Palatinate restored to the elector palatine, the religious and political rights of the German states established, and the independence of the Swiss Confederation recognised by Germany.

WEST SAXONS, see Wessex, in Britain.
WEYMOUTH Dorsetshire, was given by Henry I. to St. Swichin's, Winchester. Taken from Charles I., by the parliamentarians, 1644; visited and brought into note by George III., 1789. First Dorset industrial exhibition was opened here, 25 July, 1878.

WHALE-FISHERY, it is said, was first carried on by the Norwegians in the ninth century.

Louget. Whales were killed at Newfoundland and Iceland, for their oil only, 1578; the use of their fins and bones was not yet known, consequently (a writer adds) no staves were worn by the ladies. The English whale-fishing commenced at Spitzbergen in 1598; but the Dutch had been previously fishing there. The fishery was much promoted by an act of parliament passed in 1749. From 1800 to 2000 whales have been killed annually on the coast of Greenland, &c. The quantity of whale-oil imported in 1814 was 33,567 tuns; in 1826, when gas-light became general, 25,000 tuns; in 1840, about 22,000 tuns; in 1850, 21,360 tuns; in 1861, 19,176 tuns; in 1864, 14,701 tuns; in 1867, 15,945 tuns; in 1871, 24,679 tuns; in 1872 18,719 tuns; in 1878, 20,656 tuns; in 1883, 17,156 tuns; in 1887, 17,698 tuns; in 1890, 20,307 tuns. A living whale from Labrador, 9 feet 6 inches long, placed in the Westminster aquarium, 26 Sept., died 29 Sept. 1877. White whale (Beluga), arrived 28 May; died in latter part of June. 159 bottledness whales captured at Barns, Tankerness, near Kirkwall, 20 Nov. 1889.

WHARNCLIFFE MEETINGS of public companies (held to give enlarged powers under certain prescribed conditions) are so called because the standing orders of the house of lords, under which they are held, were introduced by lord Wharncliffe, about 1846.

WHEAT. The Chinese ascribe to their emperor, Ching-Noung, who succeeded Fohi, the art of husbandry, and method of making bread from wheat, about 2000 years before the Christian era. Wheat was introduced into Britain in the 6th century, by Coll ap Coll Frewi. Roberts. The first wheat imported into England of which we have a note was in 1347. Various statutes have regulated the sales of wheat, and restrained its importation, in order to encourage its being raised at home. In 1862 attention was drawn to the probable utility of considering the pedigree of wheat. In 1871 it was estimated that 3,571,804 acres in the United Kingdom were devoted to wheat; in 1876, 3,124,342. See Bread, and Corn Laws. Greatest producers (in order), United States, Russia, France, Great Britain, &c. The wheat crop for Great Britain is said to have yielded 71,939,647 bushels in 1888.

WHEEL, BREAKING ON THE. A barbarous mode of death, of great antiquity, ordered by Francis I. for robbers, about 1535; see Ravaillac.

WHEEL-WORK, see Spinning, Looms, Automation.

WHIGS. In the reign of Charles II. the name Whig was a term of reproach given by the court party to their antagonists for holding the principles of the "whigs," or fanatical covenanters in Scotland; and in return the name Tory was given to the court party, comparing them to the Tories, or popish robbers in Ireland. Baker. The distinction arose out of the discovery of the Meal-tub plot (which see) in 1678. Upon bringing up the meal plot before parliament, two parties were formed: the ones who doubted the plot styled those who believed in it Whigs; these styled their adversaries Tories. In time these names, given as marks of approbrium, became honoured distinctions. Hume. The Whigs brought about the revolution of 1688-9, and established the protestant succession. They were chiefly instrumental in obtaining the abolition of the slave trade and slavery, the repeal of the Test and Corporation act, Catholic emancipation, parliamentary and municipal reform, the repeal of the corn laws, and similar measures. The Whig Club was established by Charles James Fox; one of its original members was the great Francis, duke of Bedford, who died in 1802. See Liberals. For the principal Whig ministers, see Halifax, Walpole, Rockingham, Grenville, Grry, Melbourne, Russell, Palmerston, and Gladstone.

WHIP, the popular title of the patronage secretary of the treasury, whose duty it is to collect members to make a house on important occasions, &c. Sir Wm. Hayter, the liberal "whip," 1850-8, received a testimonial for his energetic services, early in 1861. The right hon. Wm. F. Adam, an able whip, died governor of Madras, 24 May, 1881. It is the duty of both conservative and liberal whips to promote the interest of their party in every conceivable way.

The management of the house of commons by bribery is said to have begun with Clifford of the "Cabal" ministry, and continued by Whigs and Tories. Mr. Roberts (under Henry Pelham) is said to have paid members sums of 1,000*l.*, 500*l.*, &c., to each at the close of a session for their support. Wrexell.

WHISKY, the spirit distilled from malt and other cereals in Scotland and Ireland, of which about eight millions of gallons have been distilled annually in the former, and upwards of nine millions of gallons in the latter. The duty upon this article once produced annually about three millions. The distillation of whisky is referred to the 16th century, but some authors state it to have been earlier, see Distillation. In 1855 the duties on spirits distilled in Scotland and Ireland were equalised with those distilled in England. Women's Whisky War, see United States, 1874.

WHIST, a game at cards, became general at the end of the 17th century.

Edmund Hoyle, who published his Short Treatise about 1749 died in 1769, aged 97. Lord Peterborough introduced short whist early in the present century, the laws were revised in 1804. "Whist," a poem. Laws by Cavendish, compiled about 1861. James Clay, M.P. an eminent player died 26 Sept. 1872.

WHITBY, N.R. Yorkshire. The monastery here, under St. Hilda, founded by King Oswy, 657, destroyed by the Danes 870, was restored by William de Percy about 1100. The Chalmers established alum works here in 1615. Whitby was made a borough in 1832, and absorbed into the county in 1889. Population, 1881, 14,086, 1891, 13,274.

WHITEBAIT DINNER, when the cabinet ministers met at the end of each session, is said to have begun at the end of the last century, through Sir Robert Preston and Mr. George Rose inviting Mr. Pitt and his colleagues to dine at Dagenham, and afterwards at Greenwich. Another account dates its origin in 1721. The annual whitebait dinner, stopped by the Gladstone ministry, was revived by the Disraeli ministry, 1 Aug. 1874, and continued by the Gladstone, 1 Sept. 1880. No dinner, 1884. The whitebait (clupea alba) is a subject of controversy. Albert Smith, of the British Museum, in his Catalogue of Fishes, says the whitebait is "a purely nominal species," and that all the examples which he has examined were young herrings (1868).

At the inquiry in June 1878 James Henry Cannon, fisherman, claimed the discovery of the fish for his grandfather Richard, who named it 180. It was mentioned in a letter in the life of Lord Malmesbury, 4 July, 1763.

WHITEBOYS, a body of ruffians in Ireland, so called on account of their wearing linen frocks over their coats. They committed dreadful outrages in 1761, but were suppressed by a military force, and their ringleaders executed in 1762. They rose and were again suppressed in 1786-7. The insurrection at was passed on their account in 1822.

WHITECHAPEL, a parish in East London, was part of Stepney till 1329. The church, built in 1673, was replaced by one consecrated 2 Feb. 1877, which was burnt 26 Aug. 1880. Population, 1881, 71,363, 1891, 74,462. New Loan Art exhibition opened 4 April, 1882.

WHITECHAPEL MURDERS, &c. Henry Wainwright, a brushmaker, murdered Harriet Lane, his mistress, on his premises, 215, Whitechapel-road, and buried the body, Sept. 1874.

While conveying the mutilated remains to be concealed in his cellars in Southwark Wainwright and Alice Day were apprehended, through the courage and activity of Alfred Philip Stokes 12 Sept. Day was discharged, Henry and his brother Thomas were committed for trial 13 Oct. 1875. Nine days' trial before Chief Justice Colclburn, Henry convicted of murder, Thomas as accessory after the fact (seven years penal servitude) 22 Nov. 1 Dec. Henry executed 21 Dec. 1875. 1831 substituted for Henry's family. 300 awarded to Stokes.

Much excitement was caused by the murder and brutal mutilation of unfortunate women at different times—Smith 3 April, Martha Turner, 7 Aug.; Nichols 31 Aug., Chapman 7 8 Sept. Coroners return open verdict. The evidence showed the murderer possessed surgical knowledge, his object being to get possession of certain organs. Two more women murdered in a similar manner near Commercial Road and Aldgate. E. Watts or Stride and O. Conway or Eddowes between 1 and 2 A.M. 30 Sept. The lord mayor offers 500 reward in relation to the murder near Aldgate, Mary Jane Kelly's body found dreadfully mutilated in 26 Dorset Street, Spitalfields 9 Nov. 1888. Rose, Mallet or Davis (?) strangled at Roper 28 Dec. Alice McKee was found with throat cut &c. in Castle Alley Whitechapel 17 July 1889. The mutilated trunk of a woman discovered under a railway arch in Ruchin street 20 Sept. Frances Coles found murdered in an archway, Orman street, Whitechapel road 13 Feb. 1892. James Thomas Sadler arrested, 6 Feb. charged 3 March.

WHITE CROSS ARMY, the shorter title of the Church of England Purity Society, established by Miss Ellice Hopkins, supported by the bishops of Durham and Lichfield and other prelates, highly successful at Oxford, Edinburgh, Liverpool, and other places, 1884.

WHITE Doves, a South Russian religious sect, said to be wealthy and superstitious, strongly advocating celibacy under a chief named Kowdrine. Members were tried for moral offences about April, 1876.

WHITEFIELDITES George Whitefield, the founder of the "Calvinistic Methodist," born 1714, was the son of an innkeeper at Gloucester, where he received his first education. He was admitted a servant at Oxford in 1732, became a companion of the Wesleys there, and aided them in establishing Methodism. He parted from them in 1741, on account of their rejection of the doctrine of election. He was the most eloquent preacher of his day. His first sermon was preached in 1736, and he commenced field preaching in 1739. He is said to have delivered 18,000 sermons during his career of 34 years. He visited America in 1737, 1739, and 1744. His followers are termed "the countess of Huntingdon's connexion," from his having become her chaplain in 1748 and from her energetic support of the sect, by establishing a college at Trevecca, 1767. See Spitalfields. There were 109 chapels of this connexion in 1851, but many of his followers have joined the Independents. He died 30 Sept. 1790, and the countess died 17 June 1791, see Tubercular.

WHITE FLAG, see Flag.

WHITE FRIARS, see Carmelites and Servites.

WHITEHALL (London), built by Hubert de Burgh, earl of Kent, before the middle of the 13th century. It afterwards devolved, by bequest, to the Black Friars of Holborn who sold it to the archbishop of York, whence it received the name of York-place, and continued to be the town residence of the archbishops till taken by Henry VIII. from cardinal Wolsey, in 1530. At this period it became the residence of the court. Queen Elizabeth, who died at Richmond in 1603, was brought from thence to Whitehall, by water, in a grand procession. It was on this occasion, Camden informs us, that the following quaint panegyric on her majesty was written.

"The queen was caught by water to Whitehall, As every stroke the ears did hew let fall, More clung about the barge: fish under water Wopt out their eyes of pearl, and swam blind after. I think the barge-men might, with easter flights, Have rowed her thither in her people's eyes: For howe'er thus much my thoughts have scan'd, She had come by water, had she come by land."

Whitehall was partly burnt 9-10 April, 1691; totally destroyed by fire, 4 Jan. 1697-8, except the banqueting-house, which had been added to the palace of Whitehall by James I., according to a design of Inigo Jones, in 1619. In the front of Whitehall Charles I. was beheaded 30 Jan. 1649. George I. converted the hall into a chapel 1723-4. The exterior of this edifice underwent repair between 1829 and 1833. The chapel was ordered to be permanently closed, 28 Oct. 1890; lent during the queen's reign, to the Royal United Service Institution, from 1 Jan. 1891; first meeting held, 7 March, 1891.

WHITE HATS, a party in the Low Countries formed about 1377, against Louis, count of Flanders. The struggle lasted till 1384, when it was settled by Philip, duke of Burgundy.

WHITE HOODS, see Catechumens.

WHITE HORSE, see Ashdown.

WHITE HOUSE (Washington), built of freestone, the residence of the president, gives name to the United States government, as St. James's palace does to that of Great Britain.

WHITE LEAD, see Lead.

WHITE LEAGUE, formed in Louisiana and other southern states of North America, to resist the aggressions of the emancipated negroes and their friends, termed "carpet-baggers." See New Orleans, 1874.

WHITE PASHA, see Sondan, July, 1888.

WHITE PLAINS (N. America), where a battle was fought 28 Oct. 1776, between the revolted Americans and the British forces under sir William Howe. It terminated in the defeat of the Americans, who suffered considerable loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners.

WHITE ROSE, ORDER OF THE, includes men and women of many shades of opinion, agreeing on one point, that all authority comes from above, utterly independent of the will of the people. They regard the revolution of 1688 as a national crime, and Jacobitism as true loyalty. The order has no religious test, its sole object being to maintain the doctrine of the divine right of kings, and revive public interest in the sufferings of the house of Stuart. (Feb. 1888.)

WHITE SHEEP, a name given to the Turcomans who conquered Persia about 1468, and persecuted the Shiites, but were expelled by Ismail, who founded the Sophi dynasty in 1501.

WHITE TOWER, the keep or citadel in the Tower of London, a large, square, irregular building, erected in 1070 by abbot Gundulph, afterwards bishop of Rochester. It measures 116 feet by 96, and is 92 feet in height: the walls, which are 11 feet thick, having a winding staircase continued along two of the sides, like that in Dover Castle. It contains an extensive armoury. Within this tower is the ancient chapel of St. John, originally used by the English monarchs. The turret at the N.E. angle, the highest of the four by which the White Tower is surmounted, was used for astronomical purposes by Flamsteed previously to the erection of the royal observatory at Greenwich.

WHITSUNTIDE, a festival appointed to commemorate the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles: the newly-baptised persons, or catechumens, are said to have worn white garments on Whitsunday. This feast is movable, being always exactly seven weeks after Easter. Rogation week (which see) is the week before Whitsunday. Whitsunday 1892, 5 June; 1893, 21 May; 1894, 13 May; 1895, 2 June; 1896, 24 May.

Whitsunday, a Scotch quarter-day, is always on 15 May, as settled by an act of 1693, but local usage varies.

WHITTINGTON'S CHARITIES. Sir Richard Whittington, a citizen and mercer of London, served the office of lord mayor three times, the last in 1419. Many false stories are connected with his name, and his munificent charities are little known. He founded his college, dedicated to the Holy Ghost and the Virgin Mary, in 1424; and his almshouses in 1429; the latter, originally built in London, now stand on Highgate-hill (built 1808) near the supposed site of the supposed famous stone which commemorated the legend of his return to London, after leaving it in despair.

WHITWORTH FOUNDATIONS. Mr. (aftd. sir) Joseph Whitworth, the eminent engineer (born 21 Dec. 1803; died 22 Jan. 1887) in a letter to the first lord of the treasury, dated 18 March, 1868, offered to found 30 scholarships of the annual value of 100*l.* each, to be applied for the further instruction of young men, natives of the United Kingdom, selected by open competition for their intelligence and proficiency in the theory and practice of mechanics and its cognate sciences, with a view to the promotion of engineering and mechanical industry in this country; and he expressed hopes that means might be found for bringing science and industry into closer relation with each other than at present obtains here. This offer was accepted by the lords of the committee of the privy council, 28 March, 1868. In 1875, sir Joseph assigned an estate to support these scholarships. For the results of sir Joseph Whitworth's will, see Manchester, 1888-90.

WHO? WHO? ADMINISTRATION, Derby's, earl of, Feb. 1853 (which see).

"WHOLE DUTY OF MAN;" (the authorship doubtfully attributed to abps. Saneruf, Frowen, and Sterne; to bishops Fell and Chapel; to Dorothy, lady Packington, and others;) first published, 1659. London. It is attributed by some to John Iacham.

WICKLIFFITES, the followers of John Wickliffe (born 1324), a professor of divinity in the university of Oxford and rector of Lutterworth in Leicestershire. He was a forerunner of the reformation of the English Church from popery, being among the first who opposed the authority of the pope, transubstantiation, the celibacy of the clergy, &c. Wickliffe, protected by John of Gaunt, Edward's son and Richard's uncle, was virulently persecuted by the church, and only saved from martyrdom by a paralytic attack, which caused his death, 31 Dec. 1384, in his 60th year. The Council of Constance, in 1414, decreed his bones to be disinterred and burnt, which was done by the bishop of Lincoln, and his dust was cast into the river Swift, 1415. Wickliffe's English version of the Bible was commenced in 1380; a noble edition of it was printed at Oxford in 1850. Wycliff Society, founded in 1882 to publish his works. Quin-centenary of his death celebrated in London, &c., 21 May, 1884. See Lollards.

WIDOWS. The Jewish law required a man's brother to marry his widow if without children (1990 a c) For the burning of widows in India, see Sati. Among the numerous associations in London for the relief of widows are, one for the widows of musicians, instituted in 1738, for widows of naval men, founded in 1739 for widows of medical men, 1788 a law society, for widows of professional gentlemen, 1817, and a society for artists' widows, 1827 —Widows were taxed in England as follows: a duke, 12*l* 10*s*, lower peers, smaller sums, a common person, 1*s*, 7 Will III 1695

"These sums shall be taken from the six millions which I deposited on leaving Paris in 1815 and from the interest at the rate of 5 per cent since July 1815 the account of which shall be adjusted with the bank by the counts Montholon and Bertrand and by Marchand.

"These legacies in case of death, shall be paid to the widows and children, and in their default, shall revert to the capital. I institute the counts Montholon, Bertrand and Marchand my testamentary executors. This present testament, written entirely by my own hand, is signed and sealed with my arms.

"NAPOLEON

"24 April. 1821 Longwood.

The following are part of the eight *Codex*s to the preceding will of the emperor —

"On the liquidation of my civil list of Italy—such as money, jewels, plate, linen, coffers, caskets of which the inventory is the depositary, and which belong to me. I dispose of two millions, which I leave to my most faithful servants. I hope that without their showing any cause my son Eugene Napoleon will discharge them faithfully. He cannot forget the forty millions which I have given him in Italy or by the right (garage) of his mother's inheritance.

"From the funds remitted in gold to the empress Maria Louise, my very dear and well beloved spouse at Orleans, in 1814, there remain due to me two millions, which I dispose of by the present codex, in order to recompense my most faithful servants, whom I beseech recommend to the protection of my dear Maria Louise. I leave 100,000 francs to count Montholon, 100,000 francs of which he shall pay into the chest of the treasury (Las Cases) for the same purpose as the above, to be employed according to my dispositions in legacies of conservateur.

"100,000 francs to the sub-officer Cantillon (died July, 1866), who has undergone a prosecution, being accused of a desire to assassinate Lord Wellington, of which he has been declared innocent. Cantillon had as much right to assassinate that oligarch, as the latter had to send me to perish on the rock of St. Helena, &c. &c. &c.

LETTER TO M. LAFITTE

"MONSIEUR LAFITTE, I remitted to you in 1815 at the moment of my departure from Paris a sum of nearly six millions, for which you gave me a double receipt. I have cancelled one of these receipts and I have charged comte de Montholon to present to you the other receipt, in order that you may, after my death, deliver to him the said sum with interest at the rate of five per cent, from the 1st of July, 1815, deducting the payments with which you have been charged in virtue of my order. I have also remitted to you a box containing my medals. I beg you will deliver it to comte Montholon.

"This letter having no other object, I pray God, Monsieur Lafitte, that He may have you in His holy and worthy keeping.

"NAPOLEON

"Longwood, in the island of St. Helena, 25 April, 1821.

The following WILL of NAPOLEON III was published in the Times, 30 April, 1873:—

"April 24, 1865.

"This is my will. I commend my son and my wife to the high considered authorities of the state (not grands corps de l'Etat), to the people, and the army. The empress Eugenie possesses all the qualities requisite for conducting the reign well, and my son displays a disposition and judgement which will render him worthy of his high destinies. Let him never forget the motto of the head of our family, 'Everything for the French people.' Let him fix in his mind the writings of the prisoner of St. Helena let him study the emperor's deeds and correspondence. Finally, let him remember, when circumstances so permit, that the cause of the people is the cause of France. Power is a heavy burden, because one cannot always do all the good one could wish and because your contemporaries seldom render you justice, so that, in order to fulfil one's mission one must have faith in, and consciousness of, one's duty. It is necessary to consider that from heaven on high those whom you have loved regard and protect you. It is the soul of my illustrious uncle that has always inspired and sustained me. The like will apply to my son, for he will always be worthy of his name. I leave to the empress Eugenie all my private property. I am so desirous that on the majority of my son she shall inherit the Elisee and Barona. I trust that my memory will be dear to her, and that after my death she will forget the griefs I may have caused her. With regard to my son, let him keep as a talisman the seal I used to wear attached to my watch, and which comes from my mother. Let him carefully preserve everything that comes to me from the emperor, my uncle, and let him be convinced that my heart and my soul remain with him. I make no mention of my faithful servants. I am convinced that the empress and my son will never abandon them. I shall die in the Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman religion, which my son will always honour by his piety. Done written, and signed with my hand at the palace of the Tuileries the 24th of April, 1865. (Signed) 'NAPOLEON'

The WILL of FRÉDÉRIC LOUIS NAPOLEON, was written with his own hand, and signed the 27th of June, 1879, the night before he sailed for South Africa (where he was killed while on a reconnoitring party, 1 June, 1879). He states that he dies in the Catholic religion, expresses his love for his country, his mother the empress, and his friends, and his gratitude to the queen and royal family of England, and to the English people for their cordial hospitality. He constitutes his mother sole legatee, bequeaths legacies and memorials to prince J. N. Murat, M. F. Picri, baron Courcier, M. Rouher, and others, and assigns to Victor the eldest son of prince Napoleon Jerome, the task of continuing the work of Napoleon I. and Napoleon III. Executors: MM. Rouher and Picri.

WINCHESTER (Hampshire), a most ancient city, whose erection may reasonably be ascribed to the Celtic Britons, with the fabulous date 392 B.C. It was made the capital of the West Saxon kingdom under Cerdic, about 520, and of England by Egbert, 827; it became the residence of Alfred, 879-991. In the reign of William I London began to rival it, and the destruction of religious houses by Henry VIII almost ruined it. Several churches resided at Winchester, and many parliaments were held there. Memorials of its ancient superiority exist in the national denomination of measures of quantity, as Winchester all, Winchester bushel, &c., the use of which has but recently been replaced by imperial measures. The cathedral church was first founded and endowed by Gynegla, or Kenegla, the first Christian king of the West Saxons. Becoming ruinous, the present fabric was begun by bishop Walkelin, the 34th bishop, 1073. The church was first dedicated to St Amphibalus, then to St Peter, and afterwards to St Swithun, once bishop here. Dedicated to the Holy Trinity by Henry VIII. St Birinus was the first bishop of the West Saxons, his seat Dorchester, 636, Wina, in 660, was the first bishop of Winchester. The see is valued in the king's books at 2793l 4s 2d annually. Present income, 6,500l. Population, 1881, 17,800, 1891, 19,073

WINCHESTER SCHOOL, the oldest of our great schools, "Beate Marie College of Winchester," the charter of which is dated Oct 1382, was founded in 1387 by William (Long) of Wykeham, bishop of Winchester, who had established a school here in 1373. The ancient statutes were revised in 1855, and still further altered by the Public Schools act of 1868. In Nov-Dec 1872 there was much published correspondence respecting the dunghill—the execrable punishment of the boys by boy prefects. In May, 1892, it was arranged that the quinqucentenary of the school should be celebrated in July 1893

WINDING UP ACTS (to facilitate the winding up the affairs of joint-stock companies which are unable to meet their engagements) were passed in 1848, 1849, 1857, and 1862

WINDMILLS are of great antiquity, and stated to be of Roman or Saracen invention. They are said to have been originally introduced into Europe by the knights of St John, who took the hint from what they had seen in the crusades. Baker Windmills were first known in Spain, France, and Germany, in 1299. Anderson Wind saw-mills were invented by a Dutchman, in 1633, when one was erected near the Strand, in London?

WINDOWS There were glass windows in Pompeii A.D. 79, as is evident from its ruins. It is certain that windows of some kind were glazed so early as the 3rd century, if not before, though the fashion was not introduced until it was done by Benedict Shoop, about 674. Windows of glass were used in private houses, but the glass was imported 1177. Anderson In England, in 1851, about 6000 houses had fifty windows and upwards; in each about 275,000 had ten windows and upwards, and 725,000 had seven windows, or less than seven

The revenue derived from windows was in 1840 about 4 million and a quarter sterling and in 1850 (to April 3) 3 3/4 million
The tax repealed by act 24 & 25 Vict c 36 (which imposed a duty upon inhabited houses in lieu thereof) 24 July, 1852

WINDSOR (Berkshire) The Castle, a residence of the British sovereigns, begun by William the Conqueror, and enlarged by Henry I about 1110. Edward III, who was born here, 13 Nov 1312, caused the old building, with the exception of three towers at the west end to be taken down, and re-erected the whole castle, under the direction of William of Wykeham, 1356, and built St George's chapel. He assessed every county in England to send him workmen. James I of Scotland was imprisoned here, 1406 23. Several additions were made by Henry VIII. Elizabeth made the grand north terrace, and Charles II repaired and beautified it, 1676-80. Population, New Windsor, 1881, 12,273, 1891, 12,327

WISSEMBOURG, or WEISSBURG, N E
France, in the department of the Lower Rhine, situate on the right bank of the river Lauter, the boundary of France and the Palatinate. It was formerly an imperial city of Alsace, and was seized by Louis XIV in 1673, and annexed to France by the treaty of Ryswick, 1697. The "lines" of Wis-sembourg, erected by Villars 1705, were taken by the Austrians and retaken by the French, 1793, after Hoche's victory at Gensberg. On 4 Aug.
1870, the crown-prince of Prussia crossed the Lauter and gained a brilliant but bloody victory over the French (a part of MacMahon's division), determined the lines, and the Gensberg. General Abel

Douay was mortally wounded, and about 800 prisoners were made. The killed and wounded on both sides appear to have been nearly equal. The German army, composed of Prussians, Bavarians, and Wurtembergers, were, it is said, about 40,000, against about 10,000 French, who fought with desperate bravery.

WITCHCRAFT. The Jewish law (Exodus xxi 18), 1491 B.C., decreed, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." Saul, after banishing or condemning witchcraft, consulted the witch of Endor, 1050 B.C. (1 Sam xxviii). Reginald Scott's "Discoverie of Witchcraft" (against its existence) published 1584. Reprinted, 1886. Bishop Hutcheson's historical "Essay on Witchcraft" was published in 1718. Pope Innocent VIII issued a bull against witchcraft in 1484. Thousands of innocent persons were burnt, and others killed by the tests applied.

WIVES, see Marriage. By the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act passed in 1857, the condition of married women has been much benefited. When ill-used they can obtain a divorce or judicial separation, and while in the latter state any property they may acquire is secured to them personally, as if unmarried. By another act passed in 1857, they are enabled to dispose of real and personal property as separate. An act to amend the law relating to the property of married women was passed 9 Aug 1870. By it the separate earnings of a wife were secured to her own use, as well as personal and freehold property bequeathed to her. She may maintain an action at law, and acquire other rights. The husband is declared not liable for debts contracted by his wife prior to marriage, and she may be sued for them. This act was amended in 1874. Husband and wife may be jointly sued for her debts before marriage. By the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878, a magistrate can grant judicial separation, with maintenance, to a wife suffering from her husband's ill-usage.

WOERTH SUB SAUER, a town in the department of the Lower Rhine, N.E. France. After storming Wissembourg (which see) on 4 Aug 1870, the crown-prince of Prussia, with the 3rd army (about 150,000) marched rapidly forward and surprised part of the French army under Marshal MacMahon, including the corps of Gembert and part of that of Faily (about 47,000), and defeated it in a long, desperate, and sanguinary engagement near this place 6 Aug. The battle lasted from 9 a.m. till 4 p.m. The chief struggles occurred in the country round Benschaffen and in the village of Froeschwiller, the French are said to have charged the German line eleven times, each time breaking it but always finding a fresh mass behind the ridge on which Woerth stands was not captured until the French were taken in flank by the Bavarians and Wurtembergers. Nearly all MacMahon's staff were killed, and the marshal himself, unhorsed, fell fainting into a ditch, from which he was rescued by a soldier. He then, on foot, directed the retreat towards Saverne, to cover the passes of the Vosges. The victory is attributed to the very great numerical superiority of the Germans as well as to their excellent strategy. The French loss has been estimated at 5000 killed and wounded, and 5000 prisoners, 2 eagles, 6 mitrailleuses, 35 cannon, and much baggage. The Germans are stated to have had above 8000 men put hors de combat. It was admitted that MacMahon had acted as an able and brave commander.

WOLVERHAMPTON (Staffordshire), an old town formerly named Hamton, owes its present name to the foundation of a college here by Wulfstan, sister of king Edgar, and widow of Althrim, duke of Northampton, 906. The queen was present at the inauguration of the prince consort's statue here, 30 Nov. 1866, and the church-congregation was opened here 1 Oct 1867. Wolverhampton is eminent for its manufactures in metal. Statue of hon. C. P. Villiers (the M.P., 1835-92) was uncovered, 6 June, 1879, he voted personally, when aged 90, for confidences in the Salisbury ministry, 11 Aug 1892. Population, 1881, 75,766, 1891, 84,680.

WOLVES were once very numerous in England. Their heads were demanded as a tribute, particularly 300 yearly from Wales, by king Edgar, 961, by which step they were falsely said to be totally destroyed. Charles. Edward I issued his mandate for the destruction of wolves in several countries of England, 1289. Ireland was infested by wolves for many centuries after their extirpation in England, for there are accounts of some being found there so late as 1710, when the last presentment for killing wolves was made in the county of Cork. Wolves still infest France, in which kingdom 8384 wolves and cubs were killed in 1828-9. They were troublesome in the Vosges, Oct 1875. 701 wolves killed in France in 1887, 494 killed in 1891.

WORMS, a city on the Rhine, in Hesse-Darmstadt. The Roman city, Borbetomagus, was plundered by the Alemanni, 354, and by Attila, 451, rebuilt by Clovis I about 475. Here Charlemagne resided in 806. Here was held the imperial diet before which Martin Luther was summoned, 4 April, 1521, and by which he was proscribed. Luther was met by 2000 persons on foot and on horseback, at the distance of a league from Worms. When Spalatin sent to warn him of his danger, he answered, "If there were as many devils in Worms as there are tiles upon the roofs of its houses, I would go on." He appeared before the emperor, the archduke Ferdinand, six electors, twenty-four dukes, seven margraves, thirty bishops and prelates, and many princes, counts, lords, and ambassadors, 17 April, acknowledged his writings and opinions, and left Worms, in fact, a conqueror. Yet, to save his life, he had to remain in seclusion under the protection of the elector of Saxony for about a year. The edict putting him under the ban of the empire was issued 26 May, 1521. Worms was burnt, by order of Louis XIV, 1689, the cathedral excepted, and was taken by the French, under Custine, 4 Oct 1792. A memorial statue of Luther at Worms was uncovered, 25 June, 1868, in the presence of the king of Prussia and other sovereigns. Population, 1890, 25,504.

WORSHIP. The first worship mentioned is that of Abel, 3872 B.C. (Gen. iv). "Men began to call on the name of the Lord," 3769 B.C. (Gen. iv). The Jewish order of worship was set up by Moses, 1490 B.C. Solomon consecrated the temple, 1004 B.C. To the corruptions of the simple worship of the patriarchs all the Egyptian and Greek idolatries owed their origin. Athotes, son of Menes, king of Upper Egypt, is supposed to be the Copt of the Egyptians, and the Tith, or Hermes, of the Greeks, the Mercury of the Latins, and the Tentates of the Celts or Gauls, 2112 B.C. Usher.

WORSHIP IN ENGLAND. The Druids were the priests here, at the invasion of the Romans (55 B.C.), who eventually introduced Christianity, which was almost extirpated by the victorious Saxons (455), who were pagans. The Roman catholic form of Christianity was introduced by Augustine, 596, and continued till the Reformation (see below). See Hymns, Liturgies, Prayers, Public Worship, Ritualists.

WORSTED, spun wool, obtained its name from having been first spun at a town called Worsted, in Norfolk, in which the inventor lived, and where manufactures of worsted are still extensively carried on, 14 Edw III 1340. Anderson. "A worsted-stocking knave" is a term of reproach or contempt used by Shakespeare.

WORTH, see It worth.

WORTHIES, NINE, a term long ago given to the following eminent men —

Jesus	David
Joshua	BC 1426
David	1015
Judas Maccabaeus	163
Heathens
Hector of Troy	1184
Alexander the Great	323
Julius Caesar	44
Christians
King Arthur of Britain	AD 512
Charlemagne of France	800
Godfrey of Bouillon	1100

In some lists Gudeon and Gudeon are given, instead of Hector and Arthur. In Shakespeare's Love's Labour's Lost act v sc 2, Hercules and Pompey appear as worthies.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE, see Geneva Convention, and Aid to Sick and Wounded

WOUNDING. Malicious wounding of another was adjudged death by the English statutes. The Coventry Act was passed in 1671, see Coventry Act. By lord Ellenborough's Act, persons who stab or cut with intent to murder, maim, or disfigure another were declared guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. Those guilty of maliciously shooting at another in any dwelling-house or other place, are also punishable under the same statute in the same degree, 43 Geo III 1802. This offence is met by some later statutes, particularly the act for consolidating and amending the acts relating to offences against the person, 9 Geo IV, June, 1828. This last act is extended to Ireland by 10 Geo IV, 1829. An act for the prevention of maliciously shooting, stabbing, &c., in Scotland, 6 Geo. IV, 1825, amended by 10 Geo IV, 4 June, 1829, for the prevention and punishment of assaults on women and children.

WRECKS. The loss of merchant and other ships by wreck upon lee-shores, coasts, and disasters in the open sea, was estimated at Lloyd's, in 1800, to be about an average of 365 ships a year. In 1830, it appeared by Lloyd's Lists that 677 British vessels were totally lost under various circumstances, in that year. The laws respecting wrecks were consolidated in 1846 and 1854. See Seamen (commission of inquiry)

WRITING Pictures are considered to be the first essay towards writing. The most ancient remains of writing are upon hard substances, such as stones and metals, used by the ancients for edicts, and matters of public notoriety. Athotes, or Hermes, is said to have written a history of the Egyptians and to have been the author of the hieroglyphics, 2112 B.C. Usher Writing is said to have been taught to the Latins by Europa daughter of Agenor, king of Phœnicia, 1494 B.C. Thucydides Cadmus, the founder of Cadmea, 1493 B.C., brought the Phœnician letters into Greece. Pomponius The commandments were written on two tables of stone, 1491 B.C. Usher The Greeks and Romans used wax table-books, and continued the use of them long after papyrus was known, see Papyrus, Parchment, Paper Thos Astle's "History of Writing" was first published in 1784, Natalis de Wailly's "Elemens de Paleographie," 1838, see Diplomatics and Type-Writing *

The Paleographical Society was founded in 1873. Mr. Burch of the British Museum president.

WROXETER (in Shropshire), the Roman city Uroconia Roman inscriptions, ruins, seals, and coins were found here in 1752. New discoveries having been made, a committee for further investigation met at Shrewsbury on 11 Nov. 1858. Excavations were commenced in Feb. 1859, which were continued till May. Large portions of the old town were discovered, also specimens of glass and pottery, personal ornaments and toys, household utensils and implements of trade, earthenware urns, and bones of man and of the smaller animals. A committee was formed in London in Aug. 1859, with the view of continuing these investigations which were resumed in 1861, through the liberality of the late Beriah Botfield, M.P. The investigations, stopped through want of funds, were resumed for a short time in 1867. Mr. Thomas Wright published "Uroconium" in 1872.

WUNTHO, see Bunthah, 1891

WURTEMBERG, originally part of Swabia, was made a county for Ulrich I., about 1265, and a duchy for Eberhard in 1494. The dukes were protestants until 1722, when the reigning prince became a Roman Catholic. Wurtemberg has been repeatedly traversed by armies particularly since the great French revolution of 1793. Morau made his celebrated retreat, 23 Oct. 1796. The political constitution is dated 25 Sept. 1819. Wurtemberg opposed Prussia in the war, June, 1866, but made peace, 13 Aug. following, in Oct. 1867, joined the Zollverein (which see), but sent a contingent to Prussia in the war, 1870. WURZBURG (in Bavaria), was formerly a bishopric, and its sovereign one of the greatest ecclesiastical princes of the empire. It was given as a principality to the elector of Bavaria in 1803, and by the treaty of Presburg in 1805, was ceded to the archduke Ferdinand of Tuscany, whose electoral title was transferred from Salzburg to this place. In 1814 this duchy was again transferred to Bavaria, in exchange for the Tyrol, and the archduke Ferdinand was reinstated in his Tuscan dominions. Ministers from the second-rate German states met at Wurzburg to promote union amongst them 21-27 Nov. 1859. Near here the archduke Charles defeated the French under Jourdan, 3 Sept. 1796, and the Prussians defeated the Bavarians, 28 July, 1866.

XANTHIAN MARBLES.

XANTHIAN MARBLES, see British Museum.

XANTHICA, a military festival observed by the Macedonians in the month called Xanthicus (our April), instituted about 392 B.C.

XANTHUS, Lycia, Asia Minor, was taken by Harpagus for Cyrus, about 546 B.C., when the inhabitants buried themselves in the ruins. It was besieged by the Romans under Brutus 42 B.C. After a great struggle the inhabitants set fire to their city, destroyed their wives and children, and perished. The conqueror wished to spare them, and offered rewards to his soldiers if they brought any of the Xanthians into his presence, but only 150 were saved. Pindarck.

XERES DE LA FRONTERA (S.W. Spain), the Asu Regus of the Romans, and the seat of the wine-trade in Spain, of which the principal wine is that so well known in England as Sherry, an English corruption of Xeres. The British importations of this wine in 1850 reached to 3,826,785 gallons; and in the year ending 5 Jan. 1852, to 3,904,978 gallons. Xeres is a handsome and large town, of great antiquity. At the battle of Xeres, 26 July, 711, Roderic, the last Gothic sovereign of Spain, was defeated and slain by the Saracens, commanded by Tarik and Musa.

XYLOTECHNOGRAPHICA.

XERXES' CAMPAIGN. Xerxes crossed the Hellespont by a bridge of boats, and entered Greece in the spring of 480 B.C., with an army which, together with the numerous retinue of servants, eunuchs, and women that attended it, amounted (according to some historians) to 5,283,220 souls. Herodotus states the armament to have consisted of 3000 sail, conveying 1,700,000 foot, besides cavalry and the marines and attendants of the camp. This multitude was stopped at Thermopylae (which see) by the valour of 300 Spartans under Leonidas, 7-9 Aug. 480 B.C. The fleet of Xerxes was defeated at Artemisium and Salamis, 20 Oct. 480 B.C.; and he hastened back to Persia, leaving behind Mardonius, the best of his generals, who, with an army of 300,000 men, was defeated and slain at Plataea, 22 Sept. 479 B.C. Xerxes was assassinated by Artabanus, 465 B.C.

YEAR.

"English," the name originally given by the Massachusetts Indians to the colonists applied solely to the New Englanders by the British soldiers in the American war (1775-81), afterwards by foreigners to all natives of the United States, and latterly by the confederates of the south to the federalists of the north during the war 1861-64.

YARD. The word is derived from the Saxon geard, or gyrd, a rod or shot, or from gyrdan to enclose, being anciently the circumference of the body, until Henry I. decreed that it should be the length of his arm, see Standard Measures.

YARMOUTH, GREAT (Norfolk), was a royal demeuse in the reign of William I., as appears from Domesday Book, 1086. It obtained a charter from John, and one from Henry III. YEAR. The Egyptians, it is said, were the first who fixed the length of the year.

The Roman year introduced by Romulus 753 B.C. or 1040 B.C. by Numa 713 B.C. and again by Julius Cæsar, 45 B.C. (see Calendar).

The solar or astronomical year was found to comprise 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 21 seconds, and 6 decimals, 265 m.c.

The lunar year (twelve lunar months, or 354 days, 8 hours, 48 minutes) was in use amongst the Chaldeans, Persians, and Jews. Once in every three years was added another lunar month, so as to make the solar and the lunar year nearly agree. But though the months were lunar the year was solar that is the first month was of thirty days, and the second of twenty nine, and so alternately, and the month added triennially was called le-Madar or the second Adar. The Jews afterwards followed the Roman manner of computation.

The sidereal year, or return to the same star is 365 days, 6 hours, 9 minutes, 11 seconds.

The Jews dated the beginning of the sacred year in March and civil year in September. The Athenians began the year in June the Macedonians on 24 Sept. the Christians of Egypt and Ethiopia on 29 or 30 Aug. and the Persians and Armenians on 11 Aug. Nearly all Christian nations now commence the year on 1 January.

In France, the Merovingian kings began the year with March the Carolingians sometimes began the year with Christmas 25 Dec., and sometimes with Easter, which being a movable feast, led to much confusion. Charles IX. of France, in 1564, published an arrest the last article of which ordered the year for the time to comes to be copiously and universally begun, and written on and from 1 January.

The beginning of the year has been reckoned from the day celebrating the birth of Christ, 25 Dec. his circumcision, 1 Jan., his conception, 25 March and his resurrection Easter.

The English began their year on the 25th of December until the time of William the Conqueror. This prince having been crowned on 1 Jan. gave occasion to the English to begin their year at that time to make it agree with the then most remarkable period of their history. See Until the act for altering the style in 1752 (see Style) when the year was ordered to begin on Jan. 1. It did not legally and generally commence in England until 25th March. In Scotland at that period the year began on the 1st of January. This difference caused great practical inconveniences and January February and part of March sometimes bore two dates as we often find in old records 1745, 1746 or 1745 & 6, or 1747. Such a reckoning often led to chronological mistakes for instance we popularly say the revolution of 1688 as that event was completed in February 1688, according to the then mode of long reckoning. But if the year were held to begin as it does now on the 1st of January, it would be the revolution of 1689.

The year in the northern regions of Siberia and Lapland is described in the following calendar given by a traveller — 23 June snow melts 1 July snow gone 9 July, fields quite green 17 July plants at full growth 25 July plants in flower 1 Aug fruits ripe 10 Aug, plants shed their seed 18 Aug snow The snow continues upon the ground from 18th Aug. of one year to 23rd June of the year following, being 300 days out of 365 so that while the three seasons of spring summer and autumn are together only fifty six days, or eight weeks the winter is of forty four weeks duration in these countries.

See Ann. Sigis. Platonis 1 year, Sublunary Year Nahu calendar, French Revolutionary Calendar.

YEAR OF OUR LORD see ANNO DOMINI.

YEAR OF THE BEAR From the time of William the Conqueror 1066 the year of the sovereign's reign has been given to all public instruments. The king's patents charters, proclamations, and all acts of parliament have since then been generally so dated. The same manner of dating is used in most of the European states for all similar documents and records. See List of Kings under England.

YEAR AND A DAY A space of time in law and in many cases establishes and fixes a right as in an estray on proclamation being made if the owner does not claim it within the time it is forfeited. The term arose in the Norman law which enacted that a beast found on another's land if unclaimed for a year and a day belonged to the lord (de la loi) It is otherwise a legal space of time.

YEAR-BOOKS contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the courts of common law. The printed volumes extend from the beginning of the reign of Edward I to nearly the end of the reign of Henry VIII, a period of about 220 years, but in this series there are many omissions. These books are the first in the long line of legal reports in which England is so rich, and may be considered as, to a great extent, the foundation of our unwritten law, "Lex non scripta." In 1863 of see various year-books of Edward I (1292-1304) edited by Mr. A. J. Horwood, for the series of the Chronicles and Memorials, were published at the expense of the British government.

YEAST, a substance causing fermentation, was discovered by Cagnard de la Tour and Schwann, independently, in 1836, to be a vegetable cell or fungus.

YELLOW FEVER, an American pestilence, made its appearance at Philadelphia, where it committed great ravages, 1699. It appeared in several islands of the West Indies in 1722, 1739, and 1745. It raged with unparalleled violence at Philadelphia in Oct. 1762; and most awfully at New York in the beginning of Aug. 1791. This fever again spread great devastation at Philadelphia in July 1793, carrying off several thousand persons. Herds It again appeared in Oct. 1797, and spread its ravages over the northern coast of America, Sept. 1798. It reappeared at Philadelphia in the summer of 1802, and broke out in Spain, in Sept. 1803. The yellow fever was very violent at Gibraltar in 1804 and 1814, in the Mauritius, July 1815, at Antigua, in Sept. 1816, and it raged with dreadful consequences at Cadix, and the Isle of St. Leon, in Sept. 1819. A malignant fever raged at Gibraltar in Sept. 1828, and did not terminate until the following year. Yellow fever raged in the southern of the United States Sept. Oct. 1828, at Memphis, autumn, 1879, in Florida (especially in Jacksonville) and other southern states, autumn 1888. Mr. R. A. Proctor, the astronomer, died of it at New York on his way from Florida to England, 12 Sept. 1888. The epidemic abating Oct. 1888, 4,583 cases, and 396 deaths in Jacksonville to Nov. 17, 1888.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, about 3300 square miles, in territory of Wyoming.

It includes Yellowstone lake about 330 square miles with numerous geysers volcanic and other great natural phenomena rugged mountains, forests meadows, rivers and much beautiful scenery. Its formation was authorized by Congress in March, 1872. It was visited by President Arthur in 1883.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD, a peculiar body of foot guards to the king a person, instituted at the coronation of Henry VII. 30 Oct. 1485, which originally consisted of fifty men under a captain. They were called beef eaters, a corruption of buffeters, being attendants on the king's buffet or table, see Battle Axe. They were of a larger stature than other guards, being required to be over six feet in height, and were armed with arquebuses and other arms. The band was increased by Henry's successors to one hundred men, and seventy supernumeraries, and when one of the hundred died, it was ordered that his place should be supplied out of the seventy. They were clad after the manner of king Henry VIII. Ashmole's Institut. This is said to have been the first permanent military band instituted in England. John earl of Oxford, was the first captain in 1486. Beaumont's Poet Index.

YERMUK (SYRIA) Near here the emperor Heraclius was totally defeated by the Saracens, after a fierce engagement Nov. 636. Damascus was taken, and his army expelled from Syria.

YEW TREE (Taxus) The origin of planting yew-trees in churchyards was (these latter being fenced) to secure the trees from cattle, and in this manner preserve them for the encouragement of archery. A general plantation of them for the use of archers was ordered by Richard III. 1483. Stow's Chron. Near Fountains Abbey, Yorkshire, were seven yew-trees, called the Seven Sisters, supposed to have been planted before 1088, the circumference of the largest thirty-four feet seven inches round the trunk. In 1851 a yew-tree was said to be growing in the churchyard of Gresford, North Wales, whose circumference was nine yards nine inches, being the largest and oldest yew-tree in the British dominions, but tradition states that there are some yews in England older than the introduction of Christianity. The old yew-tree mentioned in the survey taken of Richmond palace in 1649, is said to be still existing.

YEZIDIS, an eastern tribe, living near the Euphrates, visited by Mr. Layard in 1841: see Devil Worship.

YEZDEGIRD, or PERSIAN ERA, was formerly universally adopted in Persia, and is still used by the Parsees in India, and by the Arabs, in certain computations. This era began on the 26th June, 632, when Yezdegird was elected king of Persia. The year consisted of 365 days only, and therefore its commencement, like that of the old Egyptian and Armenian year, anticipated the Julian year by one day in every four years. This difference amounted to nearly 112 days in the year 1075, when it was reformed by J. J. al-Kindi, who ordered that in future the Persian year should receive an additional day whenever it should appear necessary to postpone the commencement of the following year, that it might occur on the day of the sun's passing the same degree of the ecliptic.

YORK, ARCHBISHOPRIC OF. The most ancient metropolitan see in England, being, it is said, so made by king Lucius about 180, when Christianity was first partly established in England. The bishop Eborac was present at the council of Aries, 314. The see was overturned by the Saxons, and was revived by pope Gregory on their conversion, and Paulinus is said to have been consecrated archbishop, 21 July, 625. York and Durham were long the only two sees in the north of England, until Henry I. erected a bishopric at Carlisle, and Henry VIII. another at Chester. York was the metropolitan see of the Scottish bishops, but during the time of archbishop Nevil, 1664, they withdrew their obedience, and had archbishops of their own. Much dispute arose between the two English metropolitans about precedence, as by pope Gregory's institutions it was thought he meant, that whichever of them was first contracted, should be superior: appeal was made to the court of Rome by both parties, and it was determined in favour of Canterbury. The archbishop of York was allowed to style himself primate of England, while the archbishop of Canterbury styles himself primate of all England. The province of York now contains the dioceses of York, Carlisle, Chester, Dur-hem, Sodor and Man, Manchester, and Ripon (which see). York has yielded to the church of Rome eight seats and three cardinals, and to England twelve lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, and two laid presidents of the north. It is rated in the king's books, 39 Henry VIII. 1546, at 100*l.* 1*9s* 2*d.* per annum. Downton. Present income 10,000*l.*

YORK MINSTER (dedicated to St. Peter).

The first Christian church erected here, which appears to have been preceded by a Roman temple, was built by Edwin, king of Northumbria, of wood, about 625, and of stone about 635. It was damaged by fire in 741, and was rebuilt by archbishop Albert, about 780. It was again destroyed by fire in the year 1069, and rebuilt by archbishop Thomas, of Bayeux. It was once more burnt down in 1137, with St. Mary's abbey, and 39 parish churches in York. Archbishop Roger built the choir, 1154-81. Walter Gray added the south transept in 1227; John de Romayne, the treasurer of the cathedral, built the north transept in 1260. His son, archbishop Romanus, laid the foundation of the nave in 1291. In 1330, William de Melton built the two western towers, which were finished by John de Birmingham in 1342. Archbishop Thorowby, in 1361, began to rebuild the choir, in accordance with the magnificence of the nave, and he also rebuilt the lantern tower. The minster was set on fire by Jonathan Martin, a lunatic, and the roof of the choir and its internal fittings destroyed, 2 Feb. 1829, the damage, estimated at 60,000*l.*, was repaired in 1832 under Sir Robert Smirke. An accidental fire broke out, and in one hour reduced the belfry to a shell, destroyed the roof of the nave, and much damaged the edifice, 20 May, 1830. This was restored by Sidney Smirke, at a cost of 23,000*l.*, 1841.

YORK TOWN (Virginia, United States). Lord Cornwallis had taken possession of York town in Aug. 1781, but after sustaining a disastrous siege, he was obliged to surrender his army, consisting of about 7000 men, to the allied armies of France and America, under the command of general Washington and count Rochambeau, 19 Oct. 1781. This mischance was attributed to Sir Henry Clinton, who had not given the garrison the necessary succour they expected, and it mainly led to the close of the war. The centenary was celebrated 16 Oct. 1881; of see On 19 Oct. the British flag was saluted generally. The town was strongly fortified by the confederates in the American civil war, but surrendered to McClellan, May, 1862.

BATTLES ZAKARUA.—A charter was granted to the British South Africa company 15 Oct., signed 20 Oct., 1889, to settle the boundary line between Lower and Central Zambesi on the north, and the Transvaal border on the south. The company includes Mr Cecil J. Rhodes, the African explorer, the duke of Abercorn and Sir John Lubbock, and other eminent persons. The Portuguese exploring expedition under Lieut. Gordon, he reserves the allegiance of several tribes, the limits of the districts sanctioned by royal decree, and the province named Zumbo.

The marquis of Salisbury protests against the assumption of Zumbo by the Portuguese refusing, to the agreement of Great Britain with Lobengula, ruler of Mashona and Makalalaland of 11 Feb 1888, and also to British agreements with Lobengula, confirmed by Lord Salisbury 28 Aug. and by General Buller, 30 Sept 1889, and to the results of British explanations.

Mr de Barros Gomes, Portuguese foreign minister in his reply sustains the claims of Portugal based on discoveries and consequent effective occupation of the territories in question for centuries, relics of which still remain. Major Serpa Pinto, with about 4000 men with several companies of the Malakolo country, harries with the natives, conquers them and calls on the British settlers to submit to Portugal, reported by Bishop C. A. Smyth. Lord Salisbury telegraphs to the Portuguese government in relation to Major Serpa Pinto, stating that they should not permit any such attacks on British settlements, or on any other settlement under British protection or influence.

Sen Barros Gomes, in his reply, informs the actions of Major Serpa Pinto, by returning to the disturbed state of the country. Lord Salisbury, in a despatch declines to recognize the claims of Portugal as antiquated, and up supported by action in modern times. A pre-emptory note sent by Lord Salisbury, requiring immediate withdrawal of Major Serpa Pinto, delivered.

Sen Barros Gomes reply being deemed unsatisfactory, Lord Salisbury declares that his government will order that no acts of force be committed against any British settlements or others exposed to him, and requests that the matters in dispute be referred to a conference of the powers, in accordance with the treaty of Berlin 8 Jan 1890.

Lord Salisbury, by telegram, requires to know that explicit instructions have been sent from Mozambique for the immediate withdrawal of Portuguese forces from the territories in question. Mr Petre, that such instructions had been sent 9 Jan. Lord Salisbury, having learned from Consul Churchill at Mozambique that Major Serpa Pinto's forces still occupied his position, and treated Nyasaland as a conquered country directs Mr Petre to require acceptance of the British demands before 10 P.M. 11 Jan. if not accepted he is to order H.M.S. Proteus at Vico, to enter the Tagus and to prepare for the withdrawal of the British legion from Lisbon.

ZINC. The ore of zinc, calamine or spelter, known to the Greeks, who used it in the manufacture of brass. It is said to have been known in China also, and is noticed by European writers as early as 1231, though the method of extracting it from the ore was unknown for nearly five hundred years after. The metal zinc is mentioned by Paracelsus (died 1541). A mine of zinc was discovered on lord Ribblesdale's estate, Craven, Yorkshire, in 1809. Zincography was introduced in London shortly after lithography became known in England, in 1817, see Lithography. Zinc is much used in voltaic batteries, and its application in manufactures has greatly increased of late years, see Photomicrography
